The faces of W.H.S.

are those of its buildings.

What is Waynesboro High School? It is a structure constructed in 1937 and expanded in 1956 and 1963 to meet the growing needs of a city of 18,500, a brick building glimpsed in driving down Main Street, an auditorium on the night of a community production.

Students know classrooms, two gymnasiums, a cafeteria, a library, a greenhouse. They see tall windows at the end of long halls shadowed by half-open doors, a ceiling with one hundred forty-four holes in each square, a chimney observed from a first-floor classroom, a gate and courtyard, two flights of steps to climb to fourth period chemistry class.

The faces of buildings, these are the faces of W.H.S.

The faces of W.H.S.

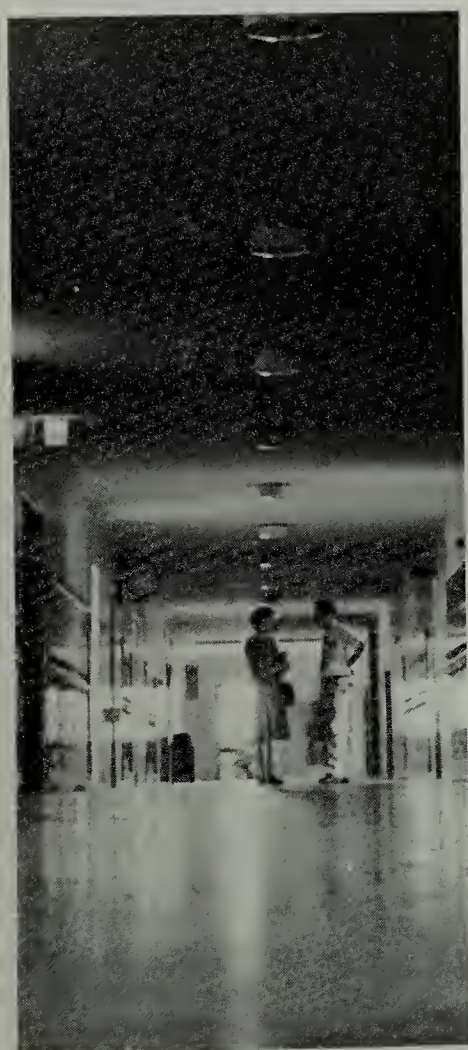

are those of its faculty.

A smile for a student's interested question, a frown for an inappropriate classroom remark, the face of a teacher discloses his emotions, the varied emotions of teaching.

Sharing a well-turned pun, recounting a travel adventure, correcting a student's pronunciation, merely finding enjoyment in teaching, the fifty members of the W.H.S. faculty and administration devote their talents to the education of Waynesboro's youth. Cheering for the team, suggesting a schedule for club meetings, helping to balance a layout, W.H.S. has a faculty that carries its interest in the students from classrooms to athletic contests to extracurricular organizations to student publications to all sides of student life.

The faces of teachers, these are the faces of W.H.S.

The faces of W.H.S.

are those of its students.

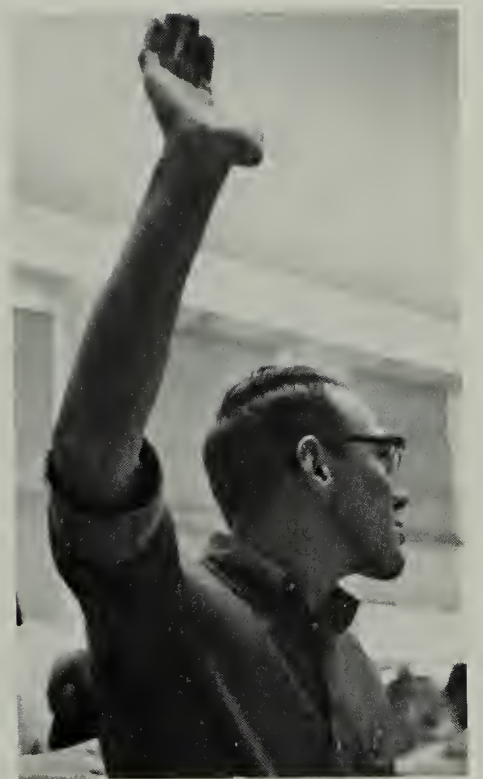

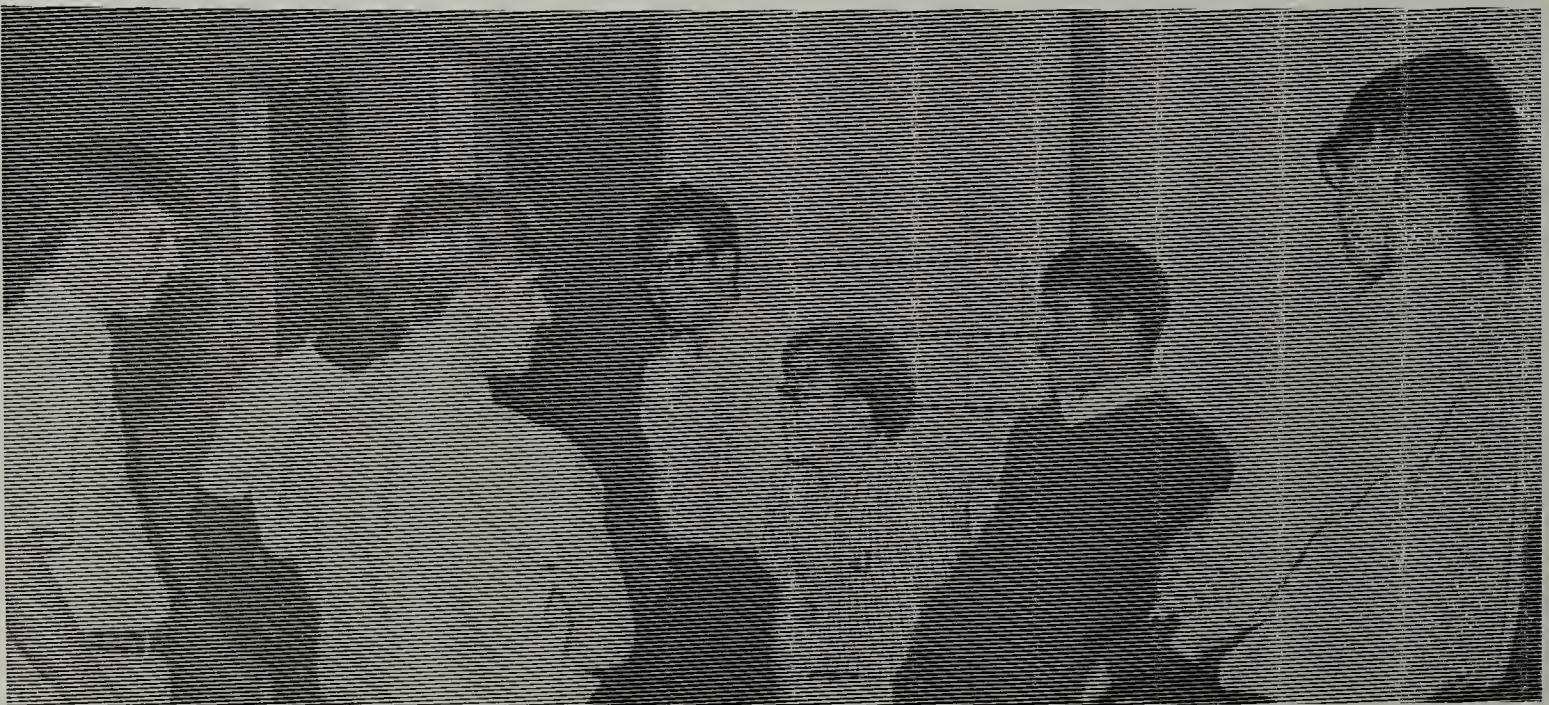

More than buildings and teachers, Waynesboro High School is its 850 students. Blended with the faces of a modern building and a progressive faculty, the face of each pupil adds a tint to the picture that is Waynesboro High School. It is only a sketch that varies in appearance, but it is constant in the purposes for which it stands.

Student faces reflect a pride in scholarship. Questioning, seeking answers in books, in teachers, and in the future itself, the face of each student reveals his interest in learning.

The faces of students striving for knowledge, these are the faces of W.H.S.

Faces mirror the constant excitement of youth.

Socially and physically as well as academically, the young faces of W.H.S. remain alive through the routine of every day. Grimaces, groans, cheers, and chuckles . . . student faces are reflectors of the atmosphere of an exciting school.

The faces of students, these are the fundamental faces of W.H.S.

The students of Waynesboro High School

face Michael Hamp

with the dedication of their annual.

Echoes of laughter from room 302, enthusiastic voices discussing an SCA dance . . . these sounds bring to mind the cheerful face of a teacher.

Michael G. Hamp has been at W.H.S. only three years but has gained the highest respect of its students as a driving force behind a successful S.C.A., an English teacher who injects interest into routine assignments with a casual classroom environment, and an ambitious coach.

The senior class has dedicated its 1966 SKYLINE to Mr. Hamp.

Visited while reviewing office files, Mr. Kiger smiles his welcome.

A finger raised for emphasis, Mr. Kiger seeks a student's opinion of a school activity.

Friendly faces of Mr. Augustin marks the date of a school dance on the office calendar.

Sharing a joke with a class, greeting a student by name, reading a poem reverently over the public address system to commemorate Veterans' Day, these actions are performed by Shirley Kiger in addition to carrying out routine duties as principal. Mr. Kiger and Ivan Augustin, assistant principal, perform the numerous administrative duties at Waynesboro High School.

Mrs. Martha Schneider and Mrs. Margaret Massie work full-time to guide W.H.S. students in preparing for their future education or occupations.

The three office assistants are familiar people to most students as they efficiently execute their secretarial duties in the school office.

Mrs. Schneider and Mrs. Massie discuss a student's record.

administrators show interest in W.H.S.

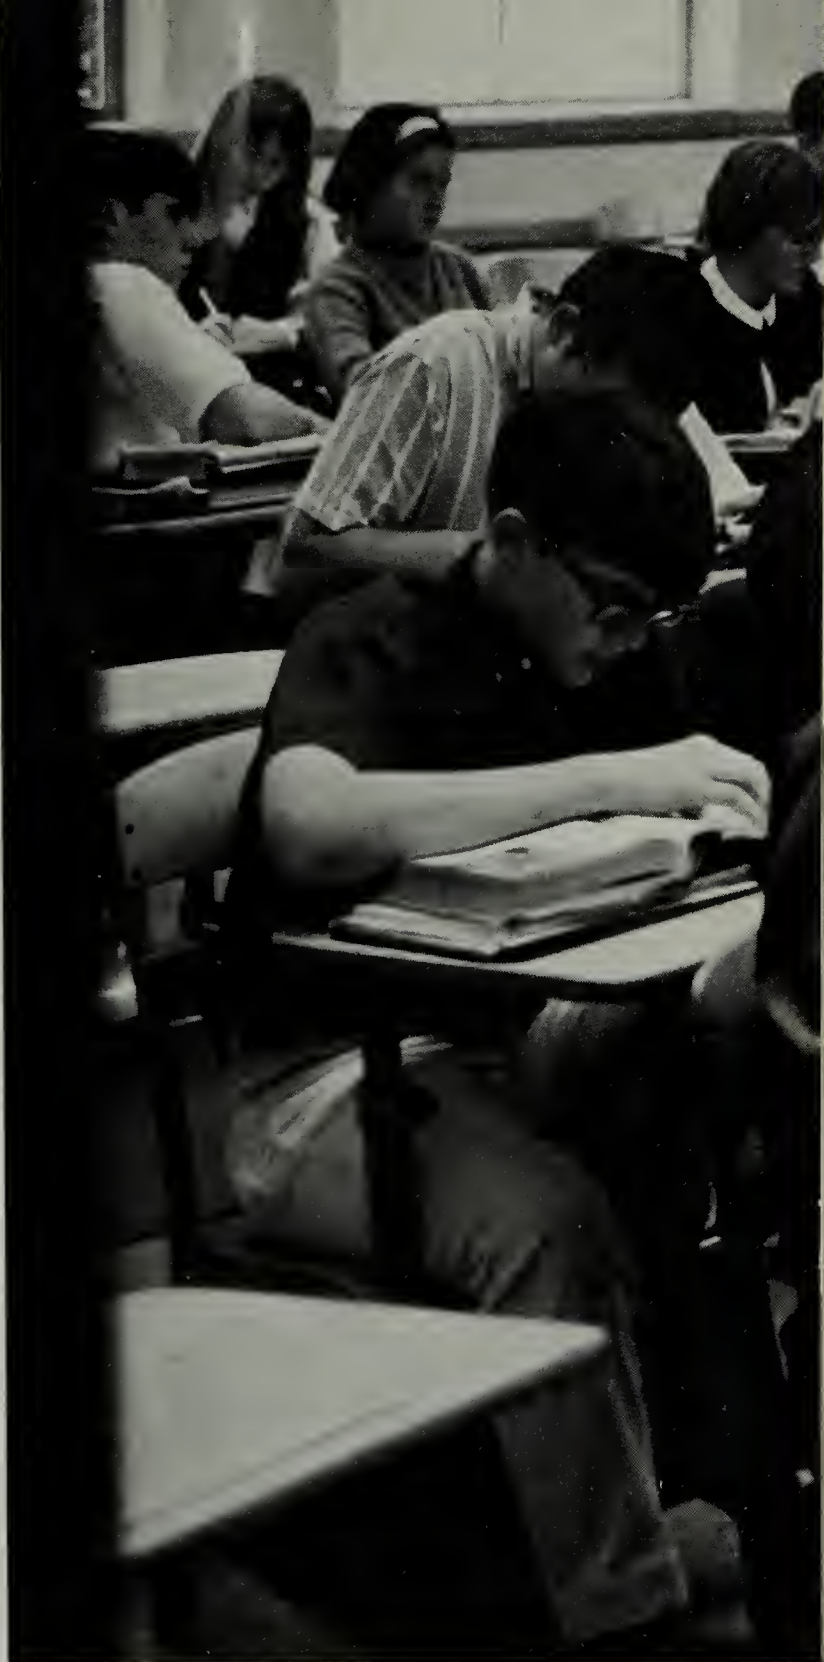

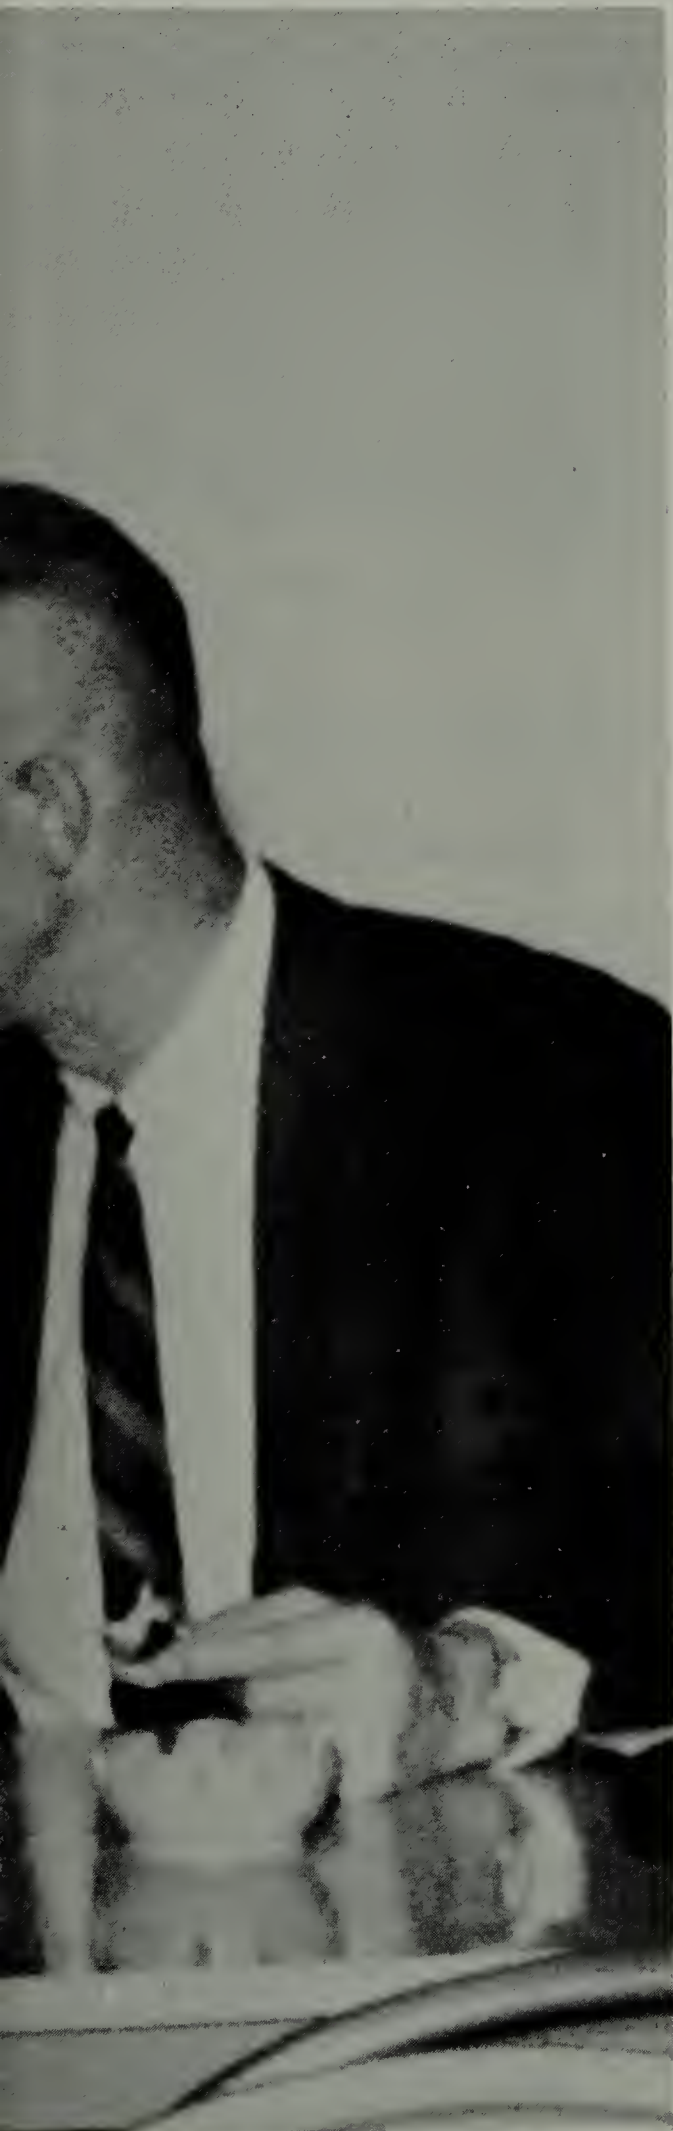

Continuing their work despite the presence of a photographer are Mrs. Polly Hawpe, Mrs. Helen Bateman, and Mrs. Mary Frances Burnett, secretaries.

FACULTY AND

CURRICULUM

Classes follow a routine, the routine of seven class periods each day, one hundred eighty days each year. But slides of a trip, educational films, recitations on records, and especially the continuing interest of dedicated teachers in the subjects they teach make each day a new experience.

The reflections of a faculty's interest can be seen in 850 student faces at Waynesboro High School.

Mr. John Raiford confers with Miss Carol Coyner over a controversial English theme.

English department stresses grammar

Mrs. Martha Harple assures a worried English student about her test paper.

Humor finds time in Miss Linda Henderson's English class.

Mr. Michael Hamp enjoys medieval period in English literature.

A discussion of BEOWULF provides an interesting topic for Mrs. Louise Moore.

Miss Nancy Akers stresses grammar in her English class.

and communication.

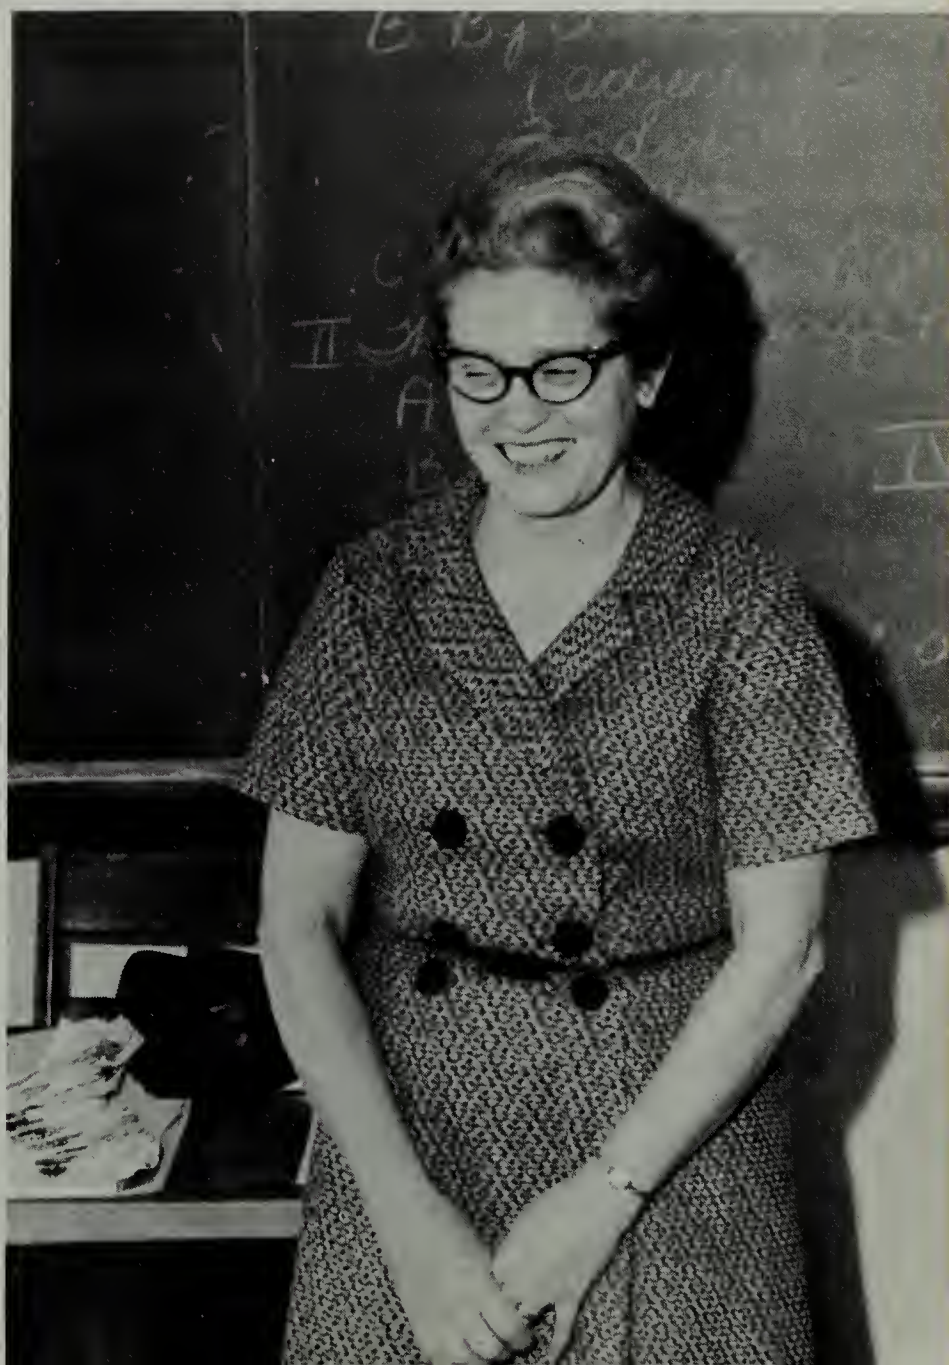

Composition text books were introduced to some of the English classes this year, and creative writing was encouraged. An emphasis was placed on direct teaching through the new texts.

Members of this year's senior class were the first to be offered English 12A, a college English course for those students who completed senior English in their junior year.

In all WHS English classes students are exposed to the fundamentals of grammar and are taught the ability to communicate. Each student is given the opportunity to develop the skills he needs for his chosen vocation or profession.

Literature is not neglected, however. An appreciation of American works is instilled with a concentrated study in the junior year. Senior classes dwell on the English classics.

A surprise answer brings delight to English department head, Mrs. Olive Forbes.

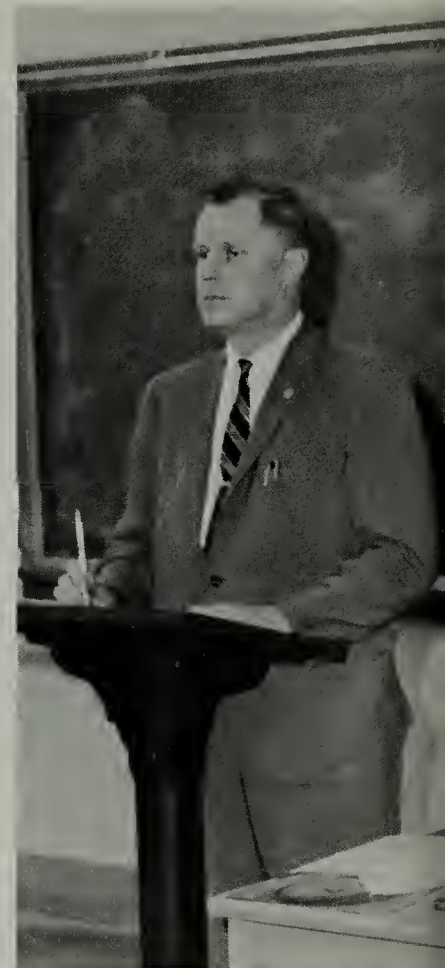

At WHS the social studies department endeavors to prepare students for a future in an ever-changing world. World history classes provide basic information about the progress of great nations of the world past and present. In American history juniors travel with Columbus across the Atlantic and into modern times studying the growth of America. Seniors strive for a better understanding of the complexities and construction of American government. Also, offered by the social studies department is world geography, an elective for world history.

Films and slides were used extensively this year, and emphasis was placed on current events.

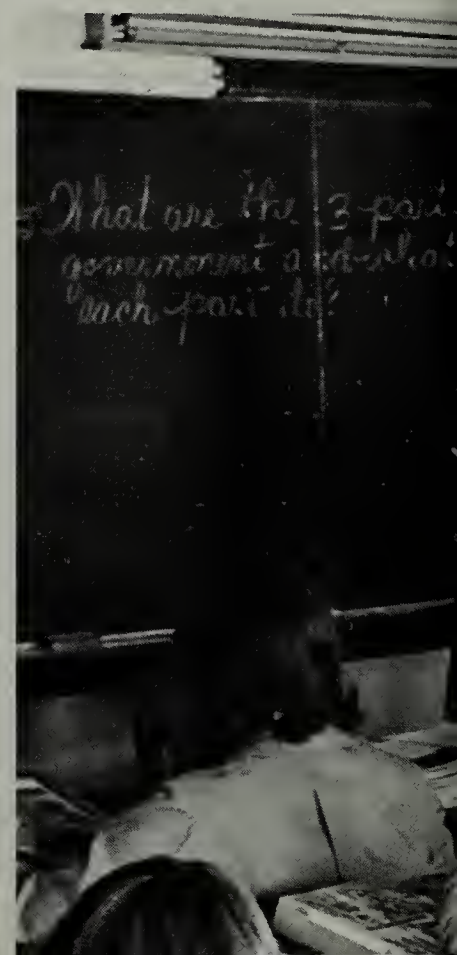

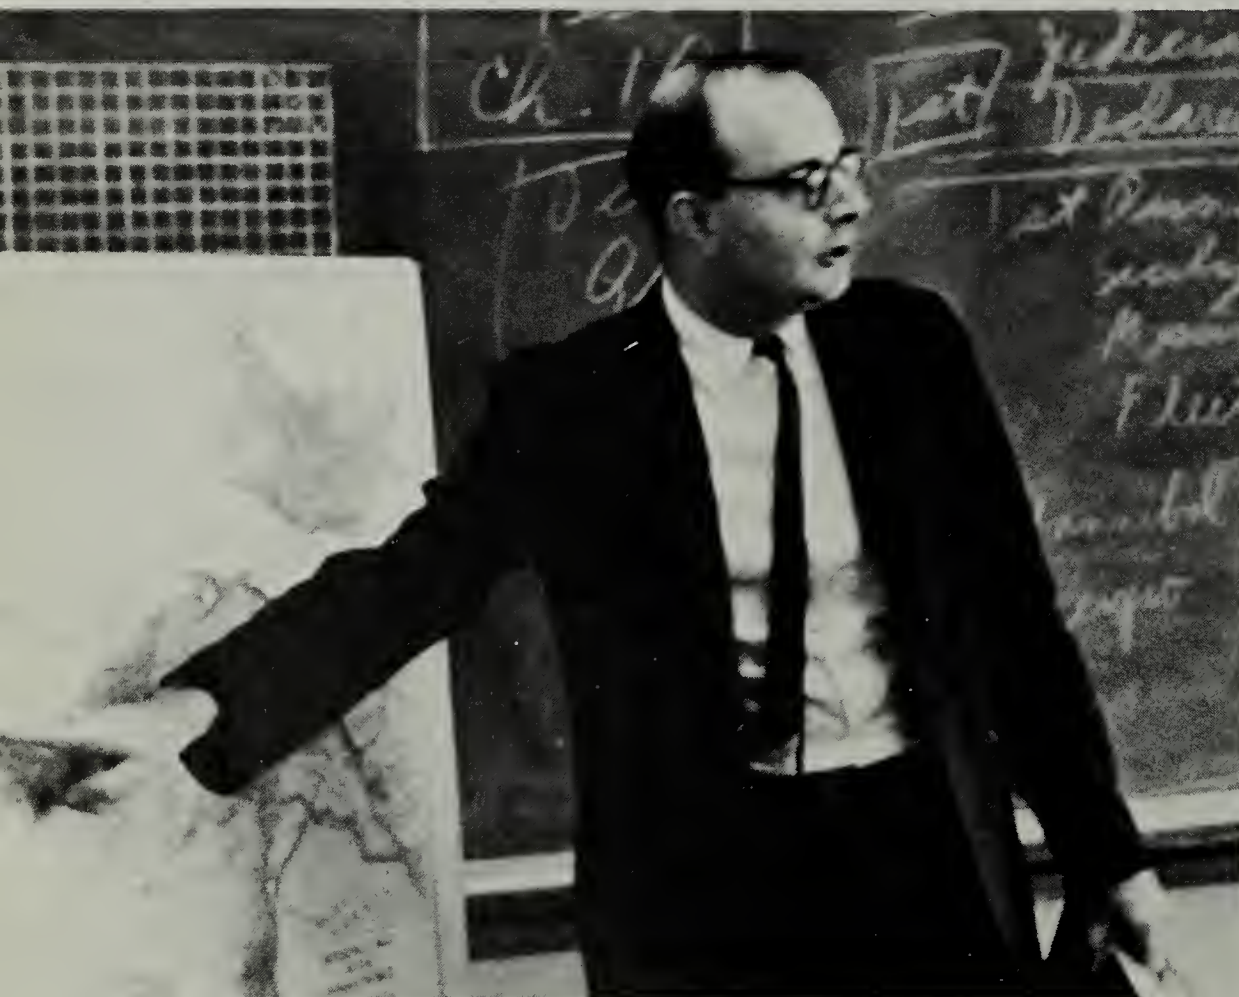

Mr. Bill Blosser likes debates in his world geography classes.

Mr. John Brown starts his day with government.

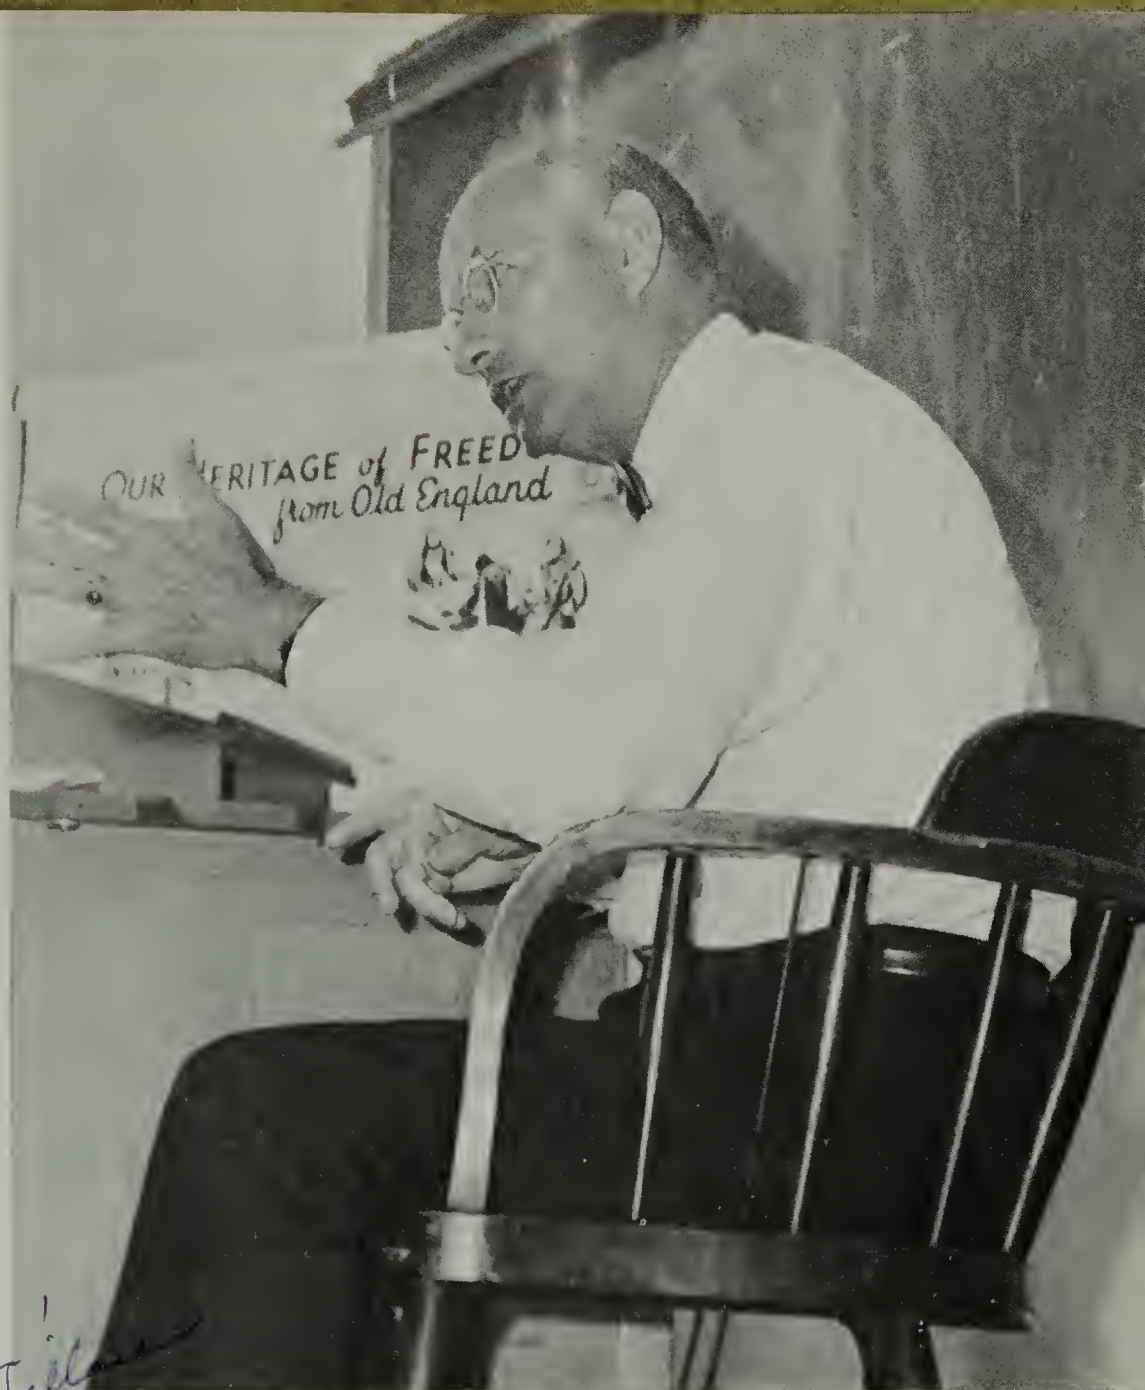

Social studies prepares students for

Mr. David Powell's lecture proves to be an interesting subject with his government classes.

Personal stories accent Mrs. Germaine White's history classes.

Discussing current events provides atmosphere for Mr. Walter Payne's government classes.

changing world.

Best wishes from your student teacher Susan Wallace!

Miss Virginia Summers reviews the parts and functions of our government.

Mr. Warren Coleman consults Miss Virginia Summers pertaining to work on a history project.

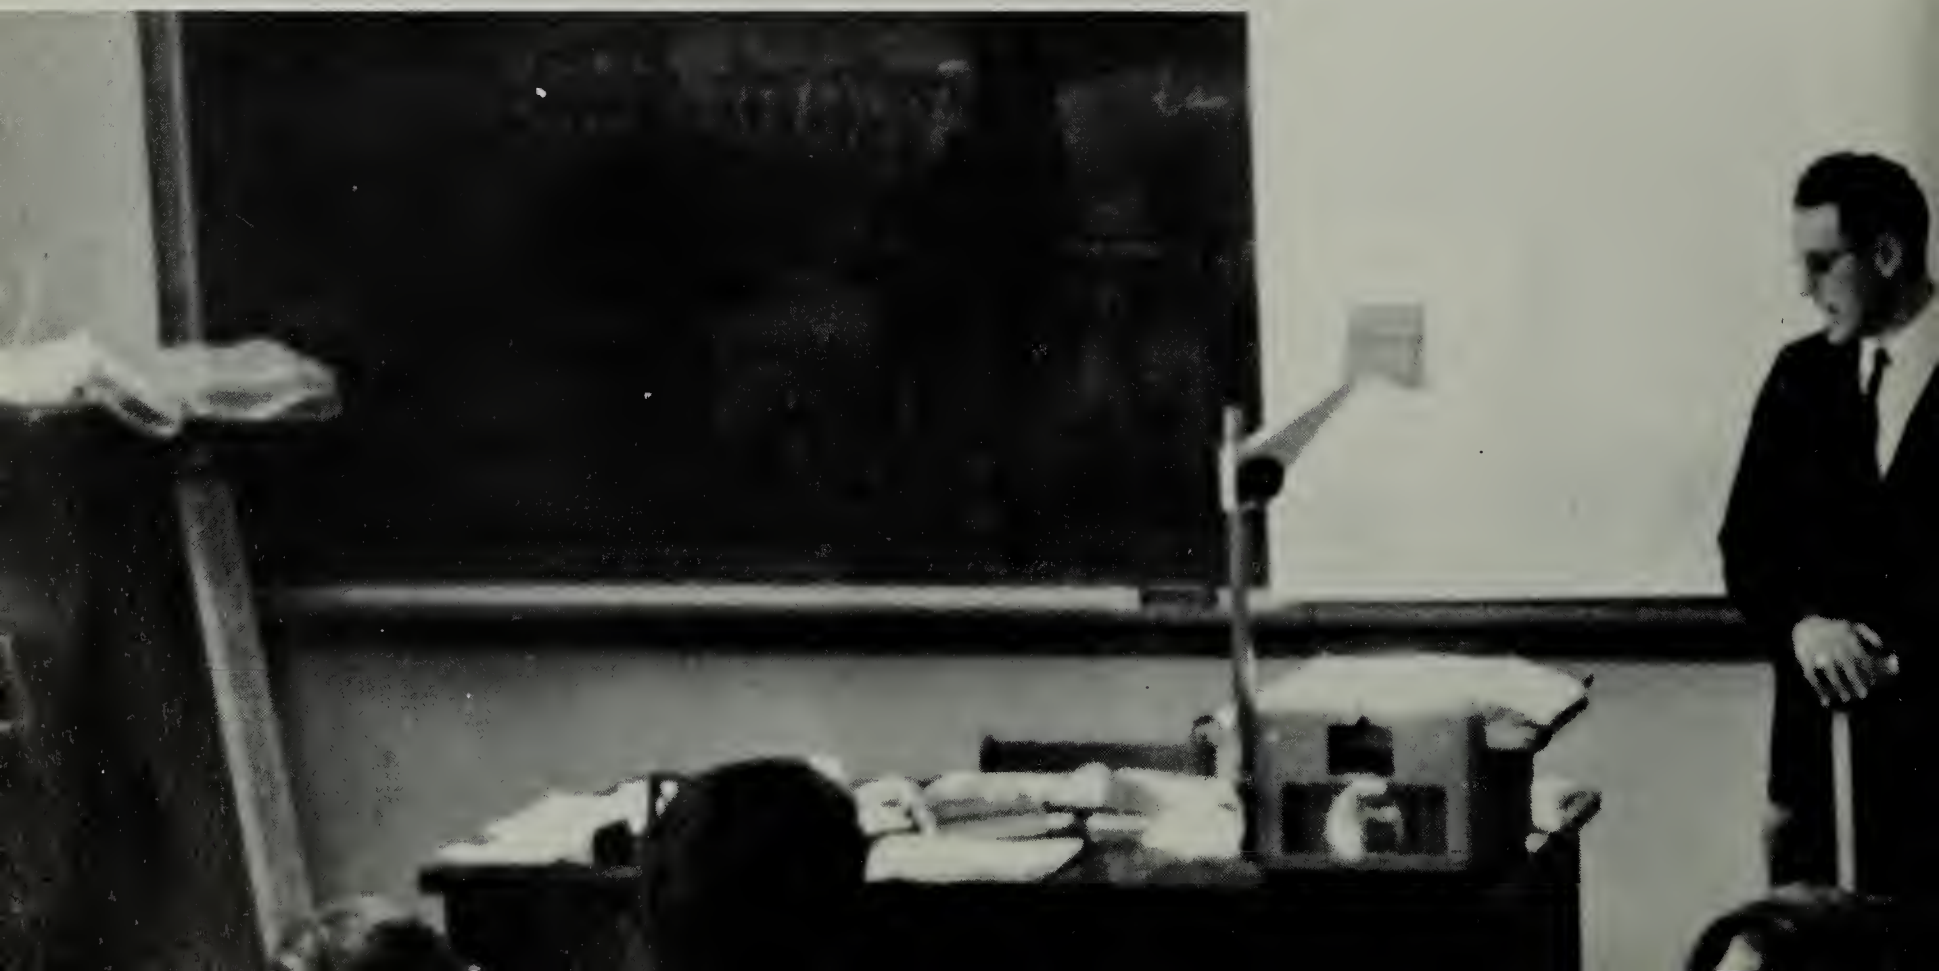

Proving algebraic proofs comprises part of Mrs. Janet Lunger's class time.

Mrs. Virginia Tucker listens to a student's own version of the Pythagorean Theorem.

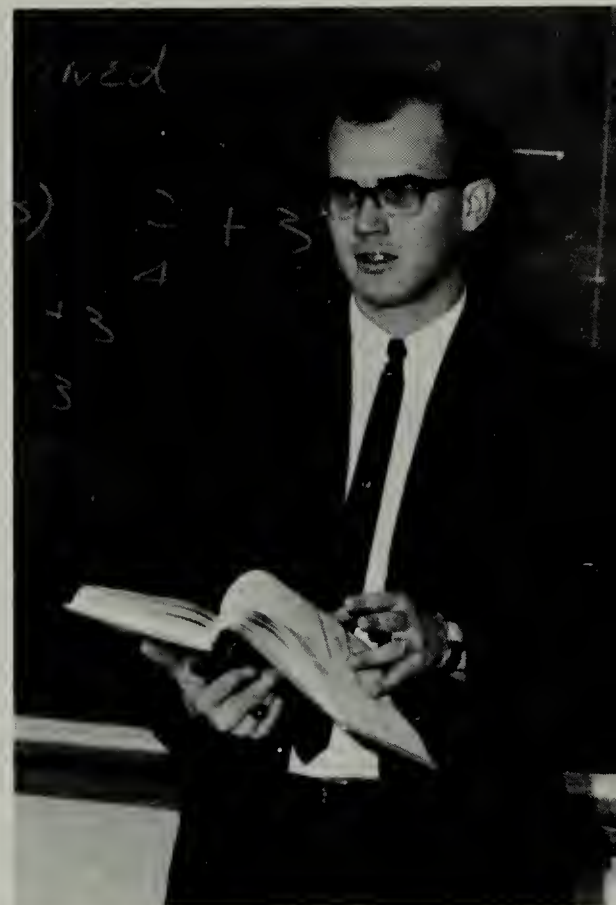

Mathematics department utilizes

Mr. Sherrill Daily eases a student's confusion by eliminating a step in a complicated trig problem.

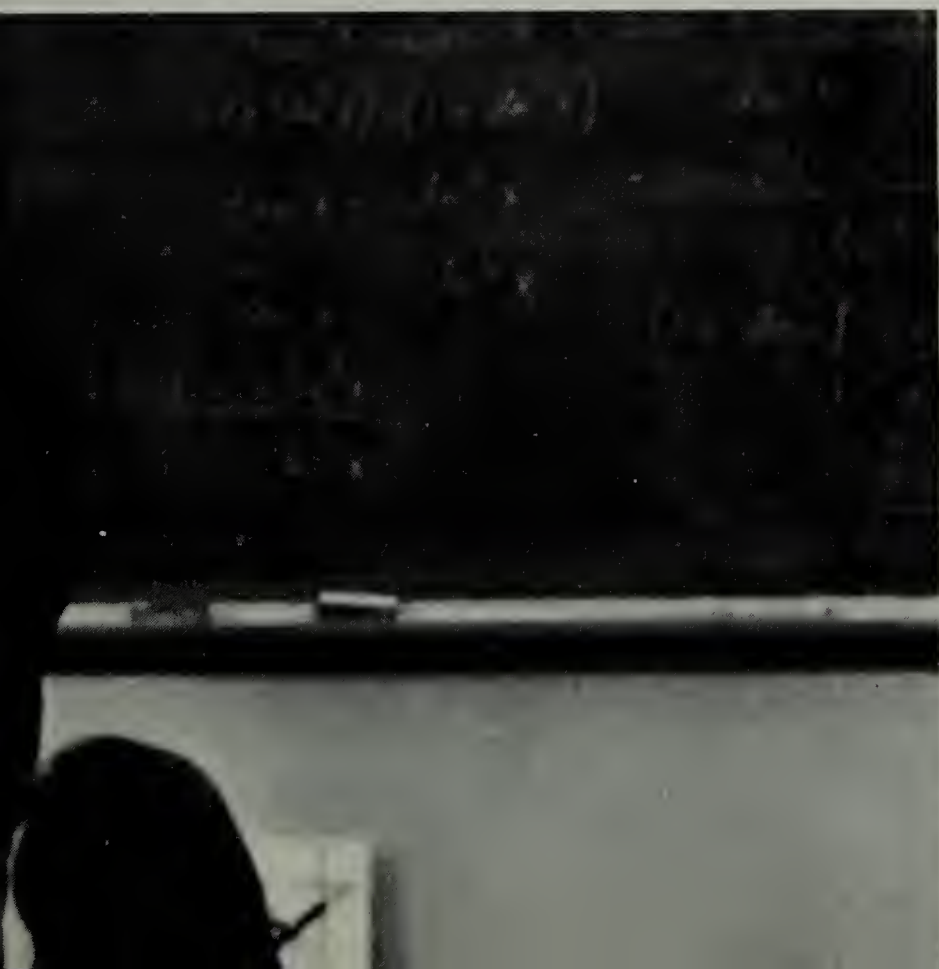

Miss Janet Knicely, mathematics department head, enjoys teaching math 12A.

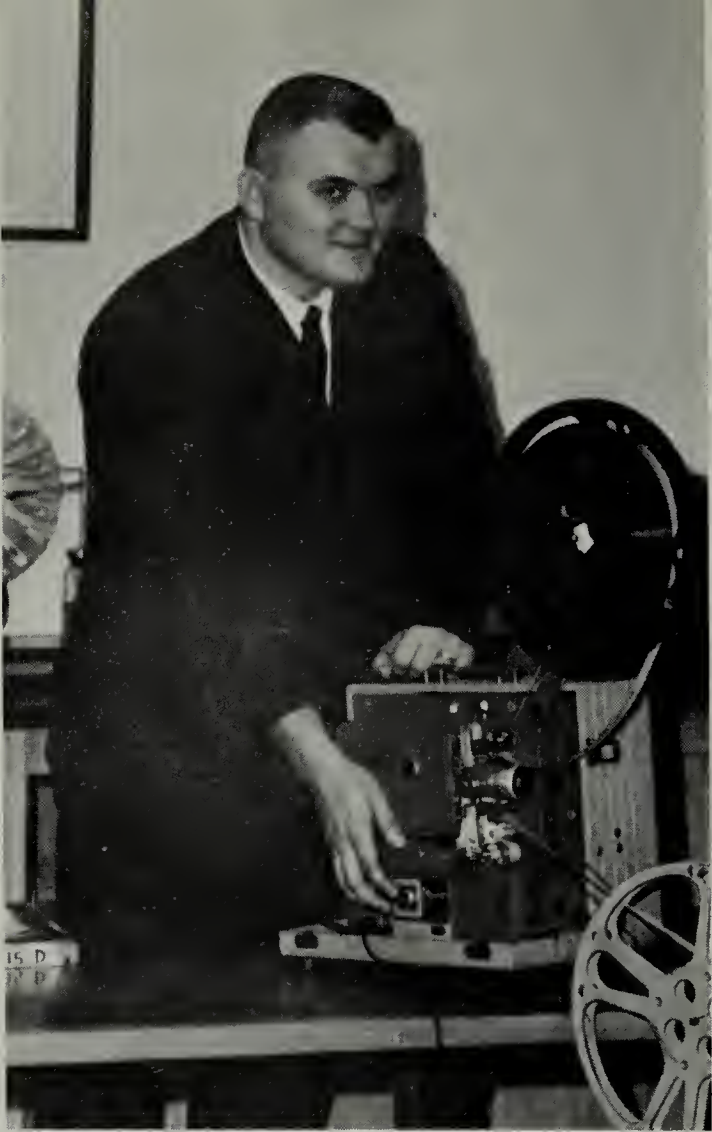

Mr. Wayne Taylor explains a complicated problem to his sophomore geometry class.

latest instruction techniques.

This year the mathematics department has stressed visual aids and MSG mathematics. Some teachers and students alike were surprised to see an eight foot box being carried down the halls. It was only one of the latest additions to the department, a class size slide rule. Also proving to be of great help was the overhead projector, used extensively this year.

School Mathematics Study Group, one of the much talked about new approaches to math has taken great effect at WHS. Recommended by the College Entrance Examination Board, it places importance on the discovery method by the student.

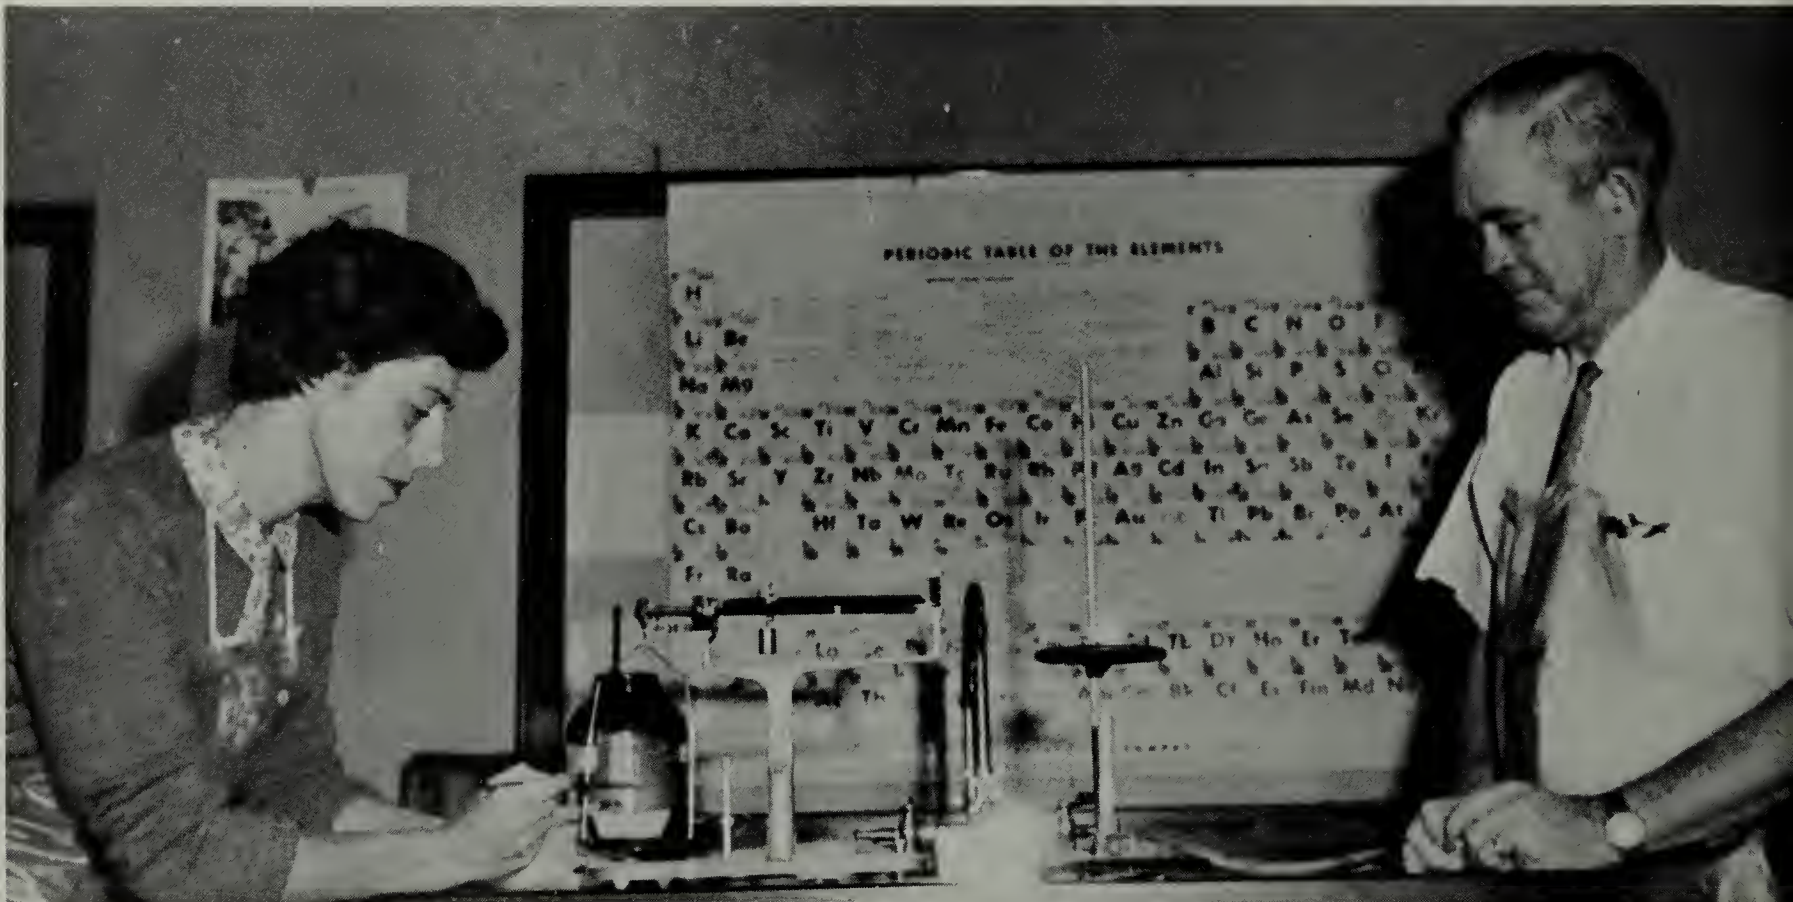

Mr. Tom Muncy often uses films to clarify classroom physics lectures.

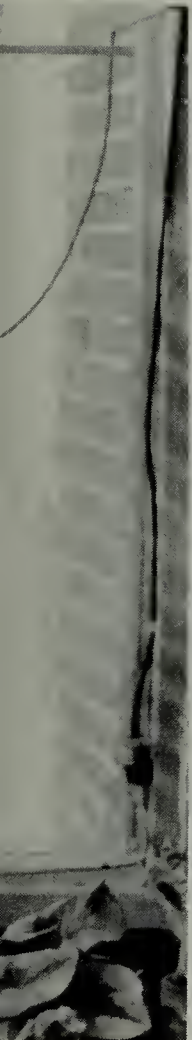

Creating new and different plants finds science coordinator Jim Lunger active in the greenhouse.

Experiments, films provide insight into

Mr. William Gilbert and Mrs. Connie Fletcher demonstrate the results of a chemistry experiment to interested lab students.

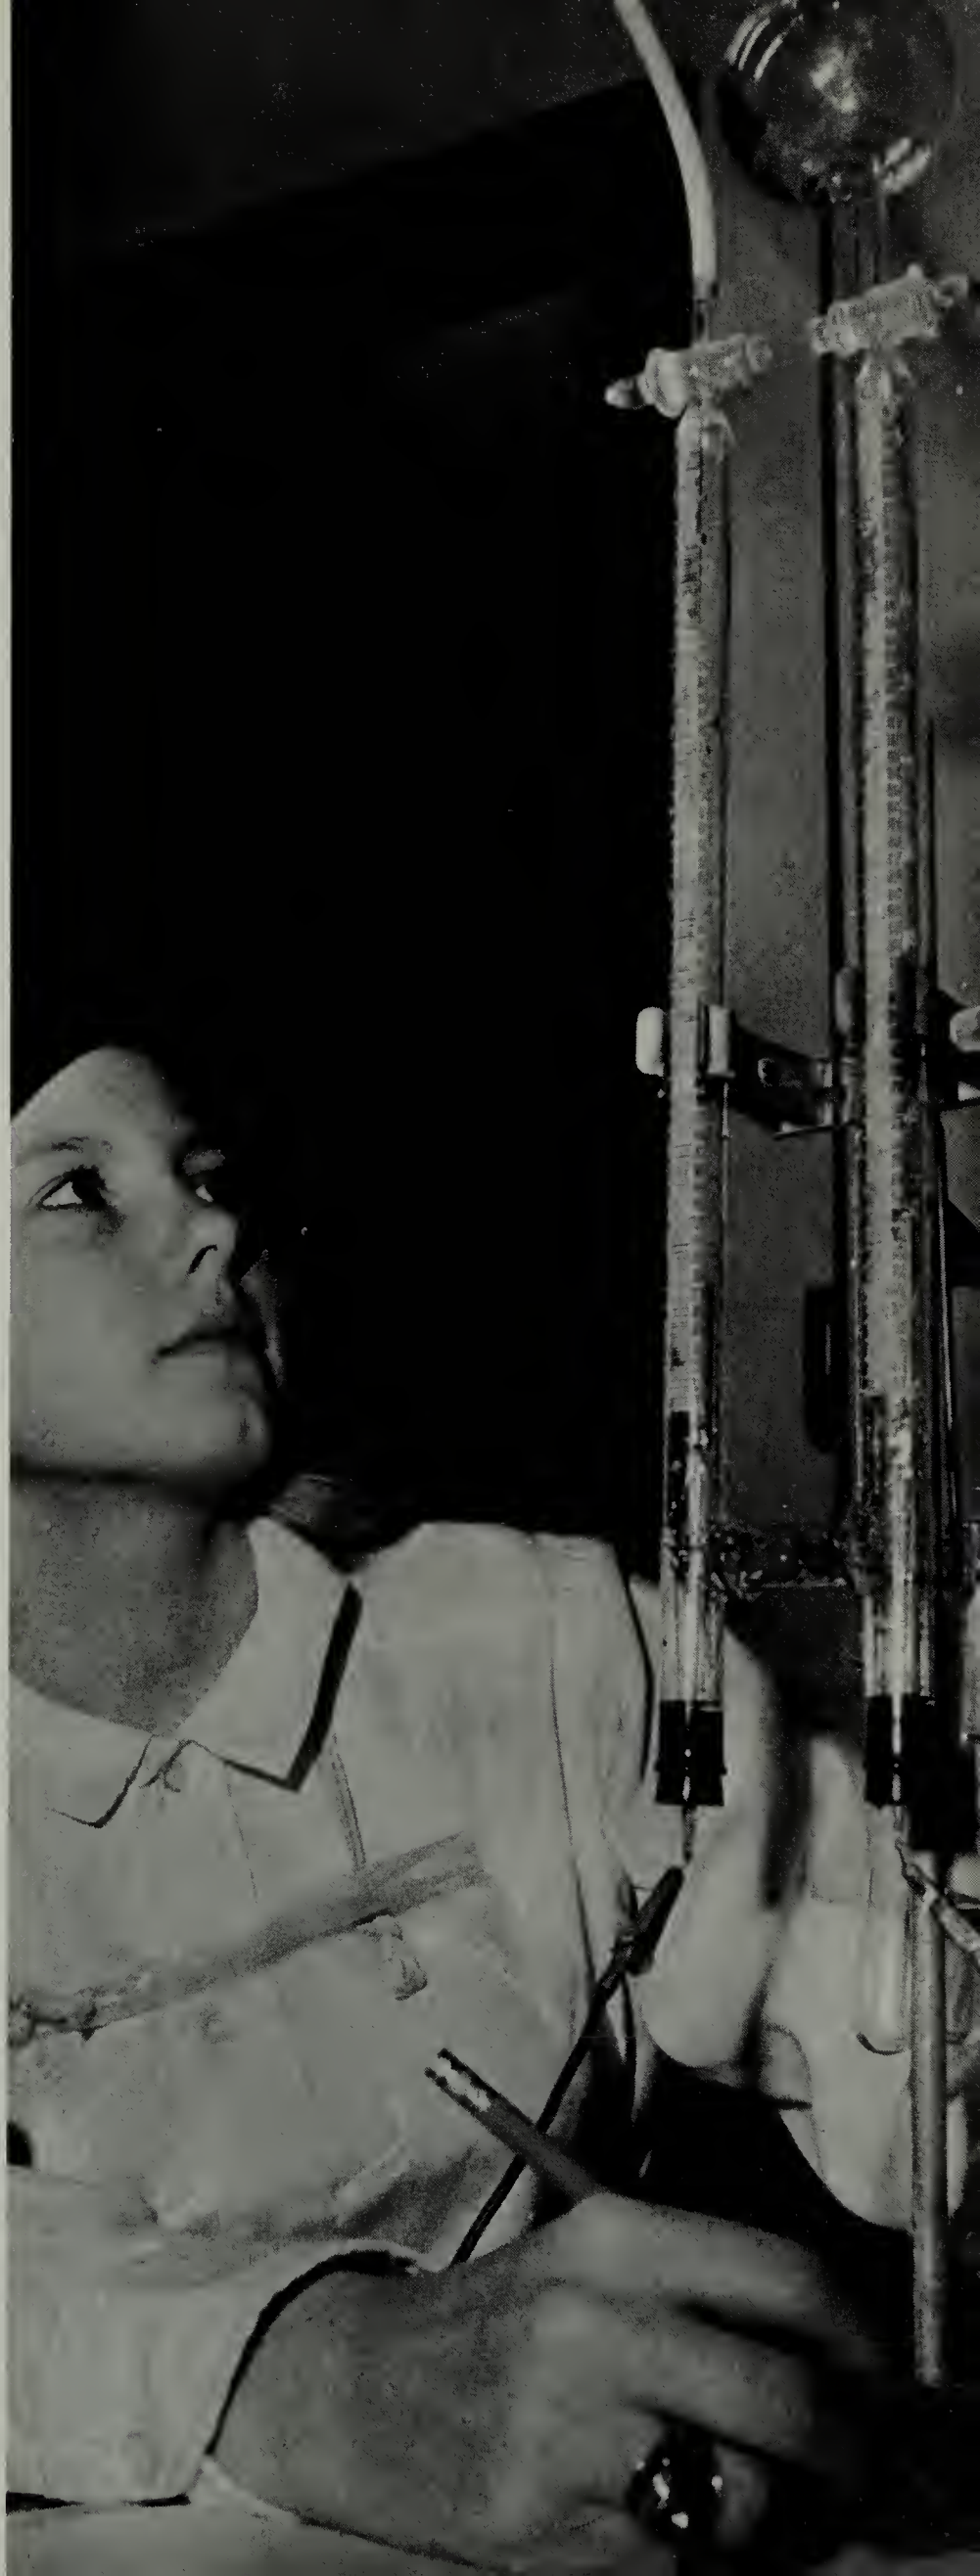

Writing an evaluation of her electrolysis of water experiment lends some interesting results to Carol Betlej.

world of science.

According to Mr. Lunger, science department head, more students were enrolled in chemistry and physics classes during the current year than ever before.

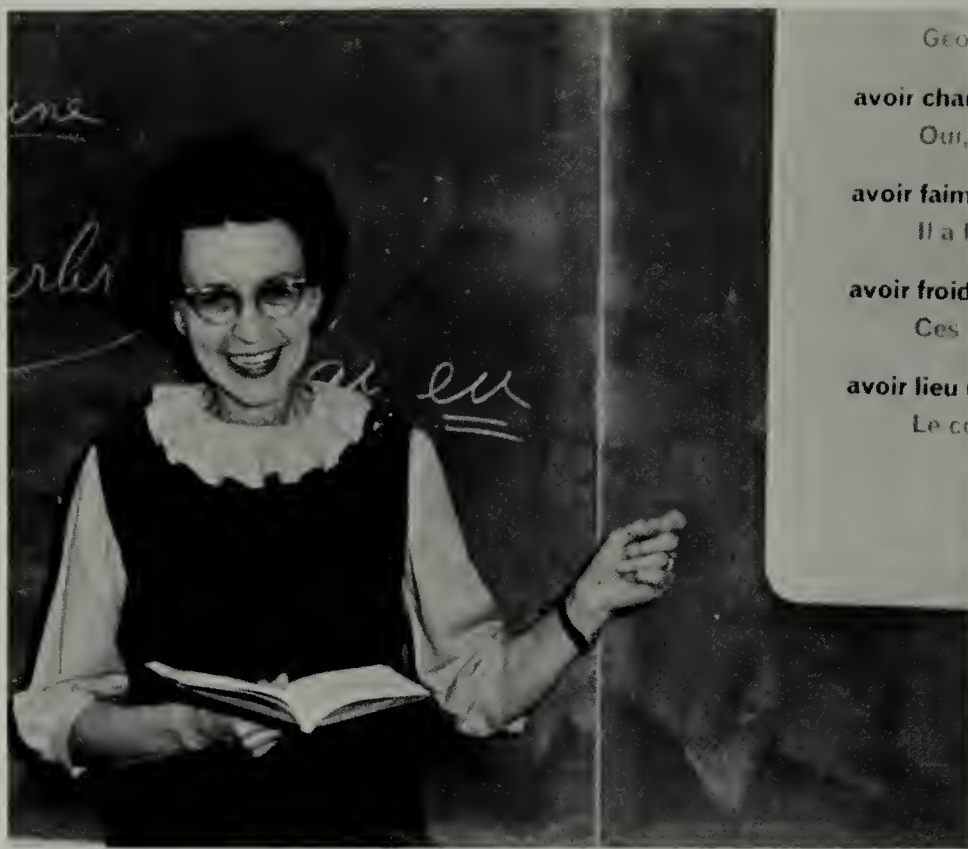

Other interesting sights in the science department included the new greenhouse on the roof of the second floor, used extensively for science experiments.

Greater heights were reached this year in Mr. Muncy's senior physics classes as students lifted each other with only eight fingers to prove the concept of mind over matter.

Spanish flags add interest and variety to Mrs. Betty Driscoll's classes.

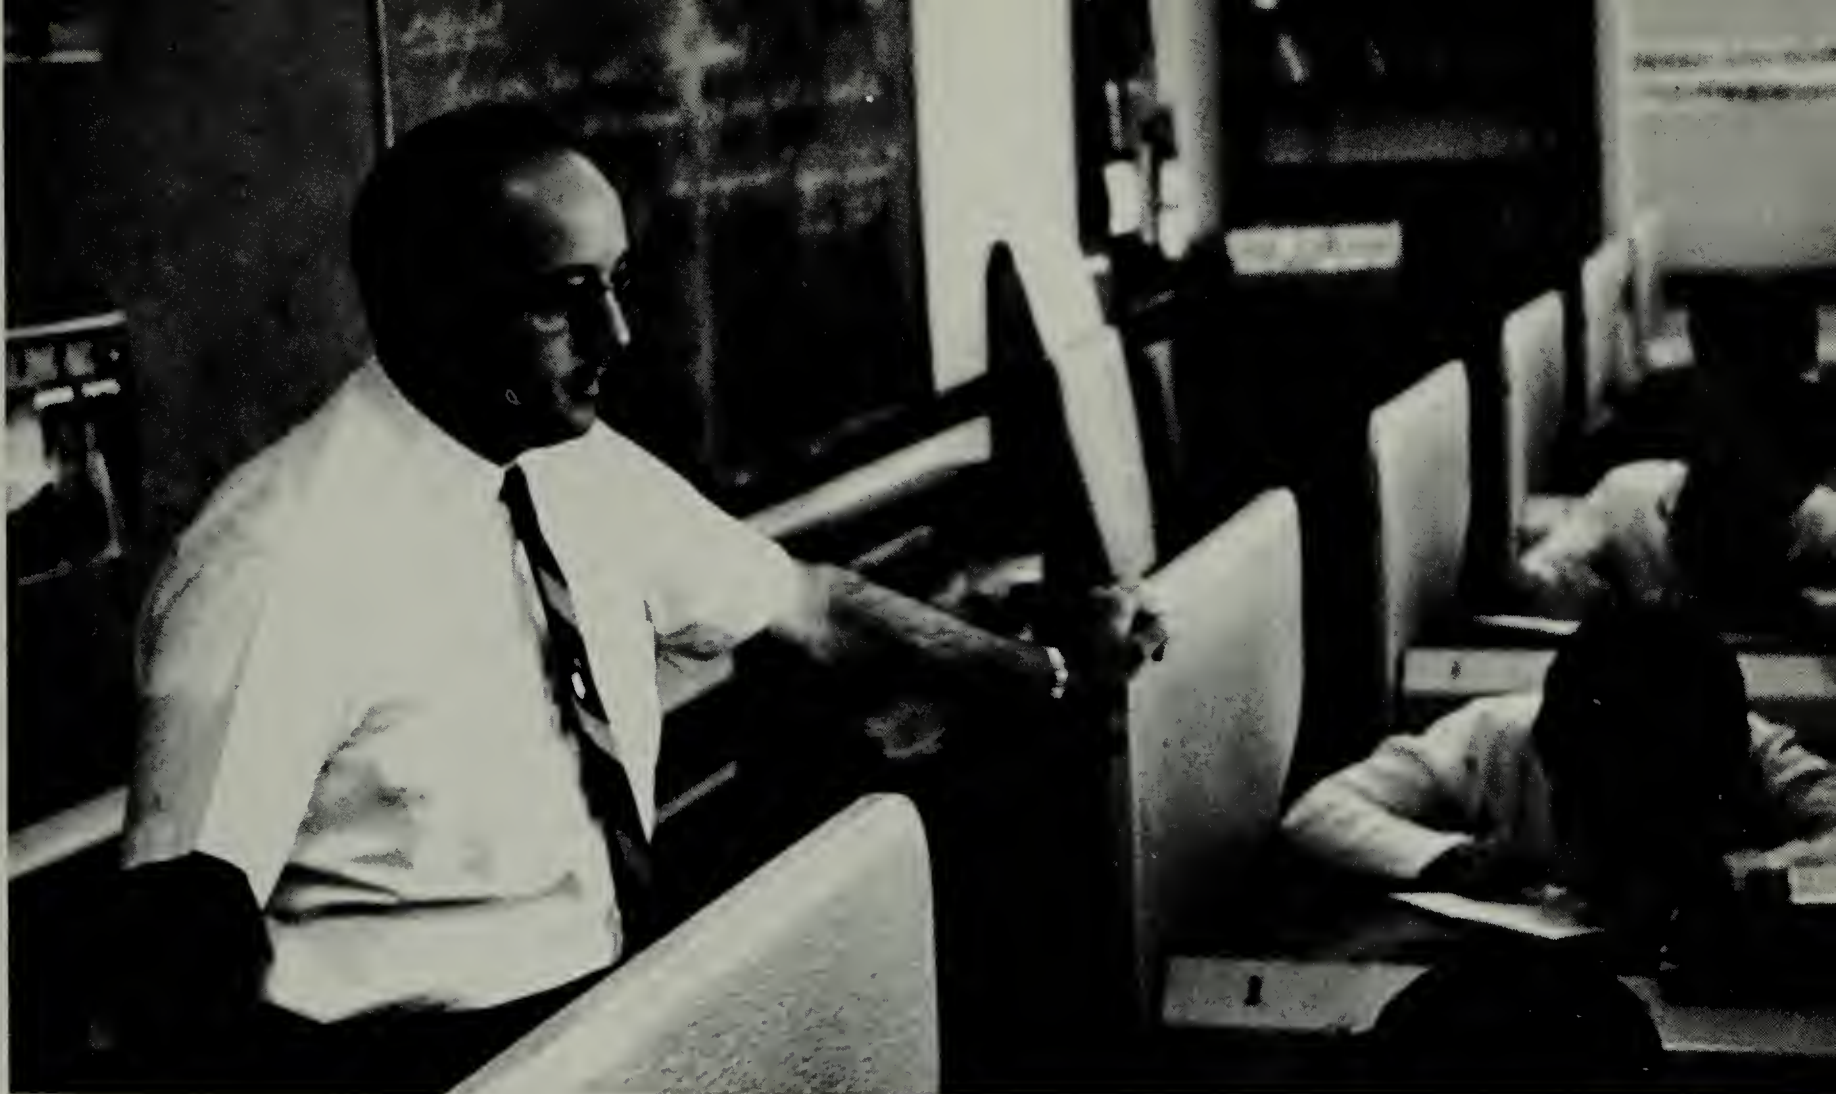

The use of language charts by Mrs. Grace Ryerson helps to provide a sound background for the French language.

Language lab provides opportunity

Mrs. Doris Snyder suggests a more complete Latin translation to a student.

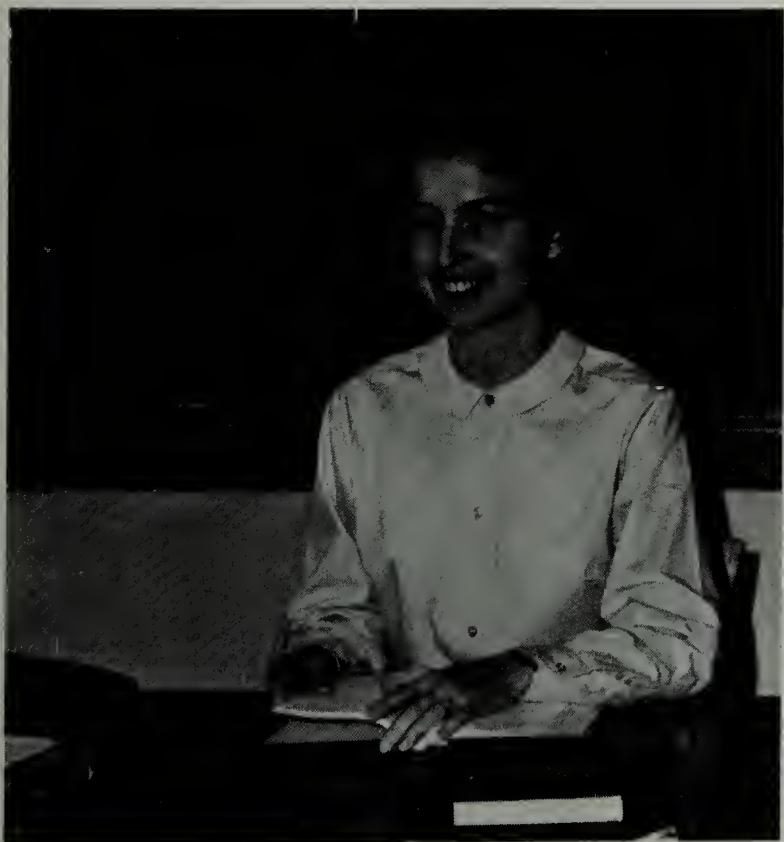

Providing oral work creates a more knowledgeable French student is a theory put in practice by foreign language department head, Mr. Nat Forbes.

to develop listening, speaking skills.

Carrying on entire class conversations in Spanish can sometimes lend surprising results, Mrs. Martha Bell has proven.

Overlooking an occasional remark of "Oh, you know what I mean!", Mrs. Bell's third year Spanish was conducted entirely in Spanish. In addition to the new third year Spanish class, the language department initiated a third year of Latin and offered five years of French.

Headphones and microphones became customary sights in French and Spanish classes, as the language laboratory was used extensively to reinforce oral comprehension and pronunciation.

Assigning timed writings, discovers Mrs. Reba Brooks, creates better typists.

New lab equipment constructs a better atmosphere for shorthand students of Miss Carol Critzer.

Miss Gwendolyn Pullen practices typing.

The clackety-clack of manual typewriters mingles with the hum of new electric typewriters and the mechanical voice of a dictation in a second floor hall. These are the sounds that issue from the classrooms of business instructors Mr. John Gilbert, Miss Gwynn Pullen, Miss Carol Critzer, and Mrs. Reba Brooks.

Typing drills, shorthand practices, bookkeeping exercises, the requirements of a business course at Waynesboro High School, have been made more interesting with the addition of laboratory equipment to the business department.

Commercial world

Machines play a big part in our lives, and business department head John Gilbert shows Gary Robertson their value to the business world.

Mr. Bruce Robinette and Mrs. Lucy Parker create exhibits which provide DE students with a lively classroom atmosphere.

is previewed in business courses.

Sophomores in 1965-66 were offered a course in retailing by the distributive education department for the first time. A "proving ground" for prospective DE students, this course gives a student an opportunity to discover if retailing is the field he wishes to enter.

Part-time employment in the retailing field combined with classroom instruction under Mr. Bruce Robinette and Mrs. Lucy Parker to provide invaluable DE experience for interested juniors and seniors.

Physical fitness is sophomore goal.

Mrs. Evelyn Stanley, girls' phys ed teacher, officiates a girls' basketball game.

Varied units of study were used in the physical education classes this year. Each six weeks period was devoted to volleyball, softball, tennis, corrective exercises, track, group and individual exercises, or folk dancing. During the first and last weeks of school students participated in the Virginia Physical Fitness Tests.

As Waynesboro High School is now a senior high school, only sophomores were required to take physical education this year.

Preparing new books for use in the library keeps Mrs. Martha Browder and Miss Gwendolyn Pullen very busy.

Staff members accentuate reading.

Significant emphasis was placed on paperback books this year. Librarians and library council members held their second annual Book Fair in November, and a conference room was converted into a permanent paperback book store.

Teachers could have audio-visual equipment brought to their classrooms, operated, and returned to the library by specially trained students.

Two different reading classes were taught at WHS. Remedial reading was programmed to raise a student's reading level and correct his reading intake, and developmental reading was designed for college bound students to magnify comprehension and speed.

Mrs. Virginia Day's goal is to create better and faster readers.

The WHS band works long and hard during rehearsals toward perfection for future concerts.

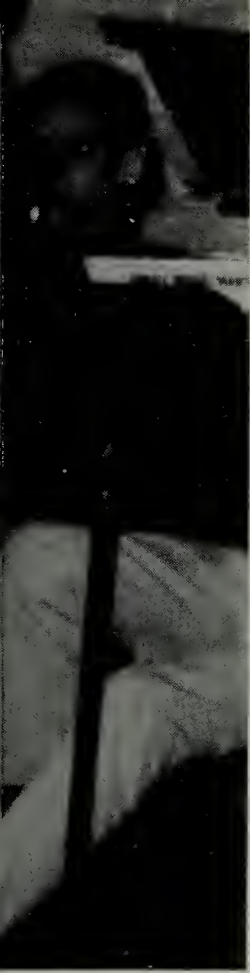

Band and chorus offer students

Mr. Jack Snyder introduces a new class of music theory to the band and choral students.

Rewards of daily first period practice were made apparent last summer as Waynesboro High School marching and concert bands captured second place at the Virginia Beach Music Festival. Besides participating in the Red Feather and Christmas parades, the band provided half-time entertainment at home football games.

Mr. Snyder, band director, has plans to increase the string instrument section, and, thus far, a new cello has been added.

For those students interested in music the WHS chorus provides the answer. Every day during third period the chorus is busy sight reading a new song or perfecting another. The varied array of voices combines to form a pleasing sound. The chorus is under the direction of Mr. Roger Zimmerman with various members of the chorus providing a musical accompaniment at the piano. Through chorus one may obtain a deeper appreciation, knowledge, and talent of music.

choice in study of music.

Mr. Roger Zimmerman answers a question about chorus rehearsal.

Sight reading requires the attention of the entire chorus during practice.

Behind-the-wheel driver lessons were offered students this year. Instructed by Mr. Fitzgerald, the course consisted of seven to twelve one-hour lessons in the safe handling of a car and the rules of the road.

Learning to drive safely is stressed by Mr. Lem Fitzgerald to Barbara Haney, driver training student.

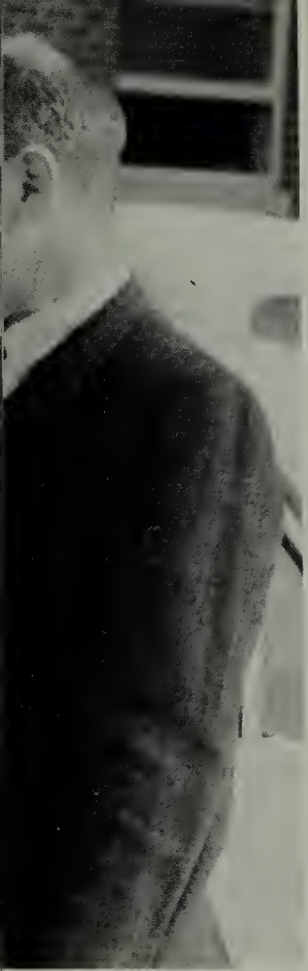

A teacher answers many questions during a school day; arts and crafts director, Mr. R. A. Yoder, is no exception as he helps Bryan Kidd.

Students learn

A bright flash lightens a classroom, and six grinning faces suddenly appear behind six cameras, as Mr. Yoder thanks the teacher for letting his photography class sharpen their talents. Newly added this year, photography proved to be a successful addition.

Besides photography, the art department offered the usual art training. In addition, the former boys' locker room was converted into a printing shop and photography room for Waynesboro schools.

Mr. Q. L. Pidcock lends helping advice to shop students.

Apparent in many Waynesboro homes are the results of student efforts in WHS's industrial arts classes, where the fundamentals of furniture construction are taught. Better known as "shop," the classes also emphasize metalworking and woodworking and stress the safe operation of numerous tools and equipment.

Mechanical, architectural, and engineering drawing, also a part of the industrial arts department, teach the fundamentals of draftsmanship.

valuable manual skills.

Mechanical drawing, under the watchful eye of Mr. Bill Counts, proves to be an interesting course for Hooty Miller.

Instruction in meal preparation by home economics department head Miss Cleada Miller helps prepare girls for their future homes.

Home economics trains future homemakers.

The fundamentals of child care proves to be a delightful topic to the students of Mrs. Faye Huffer.

Highlighting department activities this year were the annual Christmas open house, talks by guest speakers, and a new course, occupational economics. This course was designed to prepare students to enter wage-earning occupations that use home economics knowledge and skills.

Sewing skills learned in home ec. will be a valuable asset.

The well-organized cafeteria staff includes Louise Ritz, Lucy Mae Randolph, Dolena Mickens, Carolyn McGuffin, Bonnie Hoover, Edna Cline, and Maratha Fitzgerald.

Operative staffs maintain efficiency.

Donald Brooks, Mason Sampson, Joe Balser, and Linwood Mitchell render effective services as custodians of WHS.

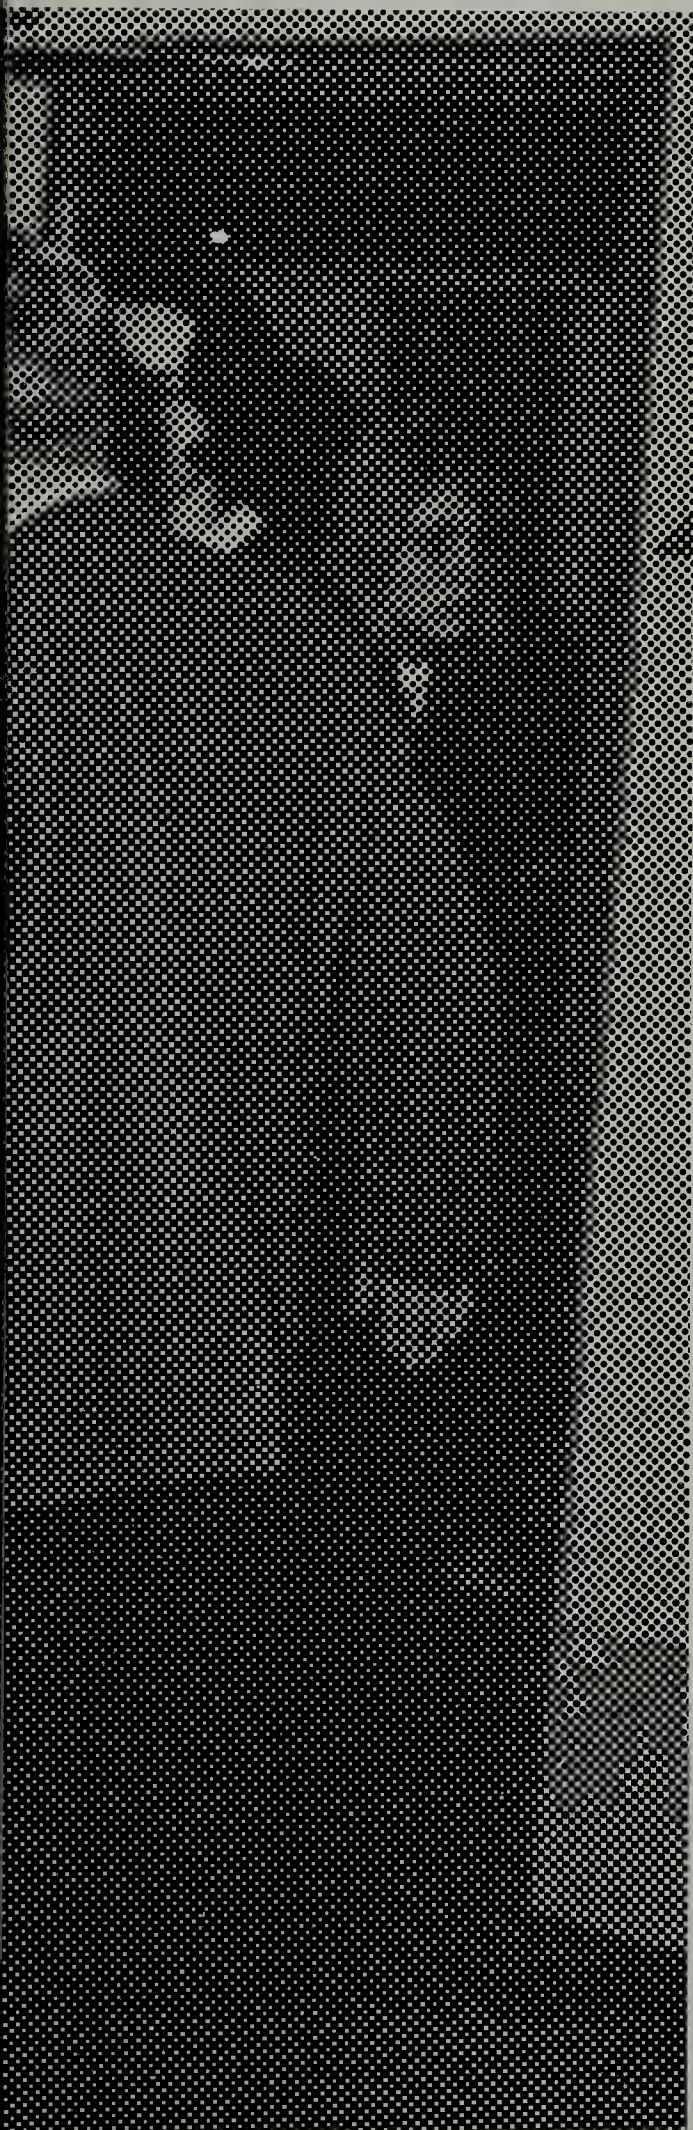

Under the supervision of Mrs. Bonnie Hoover, the WHS cafeteria staff prepared nutritious and attractive meals. Bargain Day lunches and commemorative cakes were additional features this year.

Waynesboro High School is maintained by a staff of four. Linwood Mitchell, head custodian, celebrated twenty-five years of service this year. He was honored by the school on Linwood Mitchell Day, when Anniversary Cake was served in the cafeteria.

CLASSES

A sophomore dance, a junior variety show, and, most of all, the senior privilege of stepping into the lunch line before underclassmen are dividing characteristics of students at Waynesboro High School. Senior government classes, junior English classes, and sophomore physical education classes, too, are exclusive in their rolls.

Fifteen - and seventeen-year-old faces alike attend one senior high, however, and together constitute the spirit that is W.H.S.

Beginning its final year at WHS, the Class of '66 reflected on the previous four years, which in many ways had woven its members into one. United, it looked to provide leadership in every aspect of city and school life. Through education and experience gained, these class members are now better prepared for future achievements.

Seniors enjoy privilege of leaving assembly before underclassmen.

In solitude the empty senior section awaits the upcoming class.

Confidently taking that big stride academically and activity-wise, the juniors began their big year. Considered by most classes to be the busiest and greatest, the junior year is loaded with plans for variety show and prom. Having started the powder-puff football game in the sophomore year, the class of '67 plans to continue this project until graduation. It is anticipated that this undertaking will be carried on by the class of 1970.

Besides carrying an extra load of five academic subjects and contributing to the class projects, juniors supply many leaders in activities all around school and in all phases of community life. A well-rounded group as a whole, the class of '67 has, without a doubt, contributed much to the spirit of WHS.

Sophomore class

The sophomores began their second year at Waynesboro High School undaunted by the fact that they were the youngest class -- again! Displaying their ever-present school spirit, they participated in all phases of school life.

In February the class of '68 sponsored the sweetheart dance, which was termed a success by all.

The sophomores anticipate two more eventful years at WHS.

ORGANIZATIONS

Concentration on a difficult musical selection, curiosity about a science experiment, pleasure at serving the community, varied responses are evident on the faces of interested students. Nineteen clubs at W.H.S., each sponsored by a faculty member, provide numerous educational and recreational opportunities in music, science, teaching, homemaking, and other fields.

Long after the 3:15 bell the school is alive with plans for a banquet, convention, or dance, or efforts to meet a publication deadline.

Todd.

Key Club serves community.

Few students saw several of their classmates marking and cleaning the football field for home games this year. These boys, members of the Key Club, were assisting the Athletic Department. Typical of many of the activities performed by club members, this project, too, served the aim of the club, service to school and community.

Two Key Clubbers were present at each Kiwanis Club meeting, ready to render Key Club service to their sponsors. In addition, members helped the Mental Health Association with their float in the Red Feather parade.

Politics and antics made the annual Key Club convention a memorable one for many Key Clubbers.

Too bad you didn't make it through Chem. Especially since we've started doing open book tests. Thanks a lot for that Friday night, when you were at High's. See ya this summer.

"Hardworking" Key Clubbers lime football field.

Keyettes devote time to welfare drive.

Gail Sechrist, Nikki Herrington, and Sandy Smith beam with the joy of gathering Christmas gifts for a needy child.

Joy on a child's face on Christmas morning was the reward to Keyettes for a scavenger hunt held in December. Club members collected toys and clothing from Waynesboro residents to aid children cared for by the welfare department.

Serving civic clubs, sponsoring a dance and attending a convention in Washington, WHS Keyettes found their third year a profitable one. Selected by faculty members for abilities in leadership, scholarship, and personal qualities, club members of 1965-66 sought to follow their motto, "We serve."

Maarten Ultee performs an experiment during a science club meeting.

A study of atomic energy, an experiment in nutrition, these and many other topics were the subjects taken for exhibits in the annual Science Fair. Promoted by the science club, whose members prepared a large portion of the exhibits, the Science Fair this year prompted an increased number of experiments and projects by students interested in science.

Speakers and experiments at frequent meetings as well as a record hop in January also were included among activities sponsored by the science club.

The club is a chapter of the Future Scientists of America, the Virginia Junior Academy of Science, and the Science Clubs of America.

Ars Medica stimulates medical interests.

Jean Bostic watches as Mrs. Gilbert explains the inner ear at Waynesboro Community Hospital.

Examination of a human skeleton at Waynesboro Community Hospital was a highpoint of Ars Medica projects this year. Members of the club, students interested in all fields of medicine, toured the hospital in December.

Sponsored by Mr. Gilbert, chemistry instructor, and Dr. J. Powell Anderson, a local physician, the club continued in its second year to provide members with an opportunity to study their chosen profession. With this aim, people working in the medical field spoke to Ars Medica members at several of their meetings.

Library staff offers new services.

Twenty-two girls and five boys have made this year's Library Council the largest ever at Waynesboro High School. Library Council members do general library work and operate the student circulation desk. In addition, this year several boys were instructed in the operation of equipment kept in the audio-visual room, and they relieved teachers of the task of obtaining and running the equipment in the classroom. Each member of the council applied one hour of each school day towards helping in the library.

Operating the paperback book store, preparing numerous displays and bulletin boards, and emphasizing National Book Week to students were other activities.

Discussion of surprising topics spilled from room 106 as newspaper staff members took advantage of a daily sixth period work period granted the staff for the first time this year.

GOLD AND PURPLE GLIMPSES, WHS's two-page newspaper was published in the NEWS-VIRGINIAN twice each month. Popular regular articles included the senior spotlight and student of the month as well as an anonymously written column, "Mad Anthony's Monologue."

School spirit paced by Pep Club.

Pep Club efforts were seen and heard this year as members rallied behind the Little Giants with many posters and innumerable cheers. School spirit seemed better than ever to many at WHS, and the hard work and sportsmanlike attitude of the Pep Club were commended as a large force behind the spirit. President Barbara Batten, was backed by some eighty members in a year-long drive encouraging student support of school sports.

Warm-up jackets for the girls' varsity basketball team were purchased by the club, which also sponsored a successful homecoming dance in October.

Flashes of gold were added to half-time shows at WHS football games as majorettes contributed to the performance of the band. New uniforms, consisting of gold berets topping gold velveteen dresses, were made for the eight majorettes.

Under the supervision of Miss Summers, majorettes marched at all home football games and in community parades and participated in several twirling contests.

Betas concentrate on convention, dance.

Sadie Hawkins King Pat Durkin was escorted by Joan Suddarth.

Girls openly chased boys when the Beta Club sponsored a lively Sadie Hawkins dance in October. Assistance with college night at WHS and publication of an honor roll list each six weeks also headed the list of activities for the year.

Betas attended their annual state convention in Roanoke, providing two state marshals for the event.

New members were tapped during an assembly in the spring. Members were students in the upcoming junior and senior classes who had grade averages of ninety or above and who showed good character and a commendable attitude.

Impressive N.H.S. ceremony rewards outstanding scholastic achievement.

Mike Brondoli raises a question at a N. H. S. meeting.

A cap and gown and a lighted candle grasped in a trembling hand symbolize admittance into the National Honor Society for students tapped in a spring assembly.

As the eleven society members of 1965-66 sought the NHS of 1966-67, each well remembered the day he had passed onto the stage of WHS. Though he had never worn the letter he had earned, each felt the recognition gained had been worth extra hours of studying and had encouraged efforts in his senior year.

As a sophomore solemnly watched the ceremony, he resolved to uphold a grade average of ninety-five and receive membership in the coveted society.

Mary Couper discusses an SCA project with Senator Sue Rhodes.

as core of organized student activity.

Promotion of school spirit was the main objective of an energetic Student Co-operative Association. School spirit awards, presented to one boy and girl each month, were accepted with enthusiasm by the student body. Chosen by an SCA committee, these students were selected for exhibiting excellence in school spirit.

Another major SCA project was the Foreign Exchange Student fund, created by such fundraising activities as Odd Job's Day and the SCA Christmas Dance.

Bill Watkins was chairman of the district SCA meeting held this year at WHS, and Waynesboro senators served as hosts to representatives of area schools.

Other activities included the annual Operation Santa Claus, a tape recorder fund to provide lunch-time cafeteria music, and Crash Day.

Every student at Waynesboro High School is a member of the SCA and is represented by a homeroom senator in the Student Council. In addition, senators at large were elected for the first time this year. An Inter-Club Council of the SCA relates and regulates activities of all WHS organizations.

Determination and drive put forth by president Bill Bailey as well as by faculty sponsors, Michael Hamp and John Raiford, were commended for the success of the SCA.

SCA President Bill Bailey consults his notes during a Tuesday meeting.

Enthusiasm is obvious on the faces of chorus members at a concert.

Performances by the WHS chorus were numerous in 1965-66 as more than eighty members excelled under the direction of Mr. Roger Zimmerman.

Members entertained at the October District G teacher's meeting at Madison College in Harrisonburg. In December fourteen students sang Christmas carols for Waynesboro, visiting schools, the community hospital, the district home, and downtown sections of the city.

The All State Chorus and District Festival were well represented by WHS chorus members. A Christmas concert and operetta, THE MIKADO, too, were among major activities of an active and enthusiastic chorus this year.

Bill Halpin rehearses lines for senior play.

Stars were discovered at Waynesboro High School as increased interest in acting was prompted by an active and popular Dramatics Club. Included in the illustrious membership of the club were the Senior Players of 1965 Senior Play fame.

Under the direction of Miss Coyner, members devoted their talents to preparation of their presentation in the district one-act play festival. Club members were not always before the footlights, however; they lent their theatrical talents backstage for the chorus operetta.

D.E. Club again wins district praise.

Now at the completion of its twenty-eighth year, the Distributive Education Club is the oldest and one of the most active clubs at WHS. DE, first instituted at WHS, now is a part of the curriculum of thousands of schools throughout the United States. Each DE student takes part in a morning schedule of classes at school and works for a local firm in the afternoon.

The imaginative door decorations that brightened the halls of Waynesboro High School before Christmas were prompted by the DE Club, which sponsored a contest among homerooms. Club members also operated a concession stand at home football games, sponsored a banquet in December, and attended the district and national DE conventions.

to school and community.

Mr. Snyder raises his baton and the concert begins. The sounds of clarinets, saxophones, oboes, trumpets, all the instruments played by one hundred four band members unite, and once again the Waynesboro High School concert band displays its long recognized excellence.

If the appreciation of its listeners was not sufficient, a more material reward for the band was found in the second place rating awarded the Little Giant Band at the Virginia Beach Festival in summer, 1965. Yet other praise was prompted by the marching band for its performance in local parades and at football games.

The animated face of Mr. Snyder, band director is a familiar one to members of the WHS band.

Under the direction of president Carol Betlej and sponsor Miss Henderson, meetings were devoted to the study of the teaching profession and the preparation needed to enter it.

"Hold out your left hand for the next shot. We want our candid pictures to look natural." "Get your feet off that table!" "And then we went to Dirty Sam's to ask for an ad." "Let's crash the G&PG party this period." Most WHS students hear and see only a small part of the labor that goes into the production of an edition of the SKYLINE.

The 1966 SKYLINE was composed with excitement and fatigue. There was the agony caused by being called out of bed on a holiday to rush to finish a section. There were the hamburger suppers eaten when effort to meet a deadline extended far beyond school hours. But there is now the reward -- the completed 1966 SKYLINE, well worth the hard work.

Mrs. Brooks was the life saver of the staff, ironing out numerous difficulties, reminding that a deadline was fast approaching, typing page after page of scribbled copy. For these acts and her almost unceasing patience the staff will always be grateful.

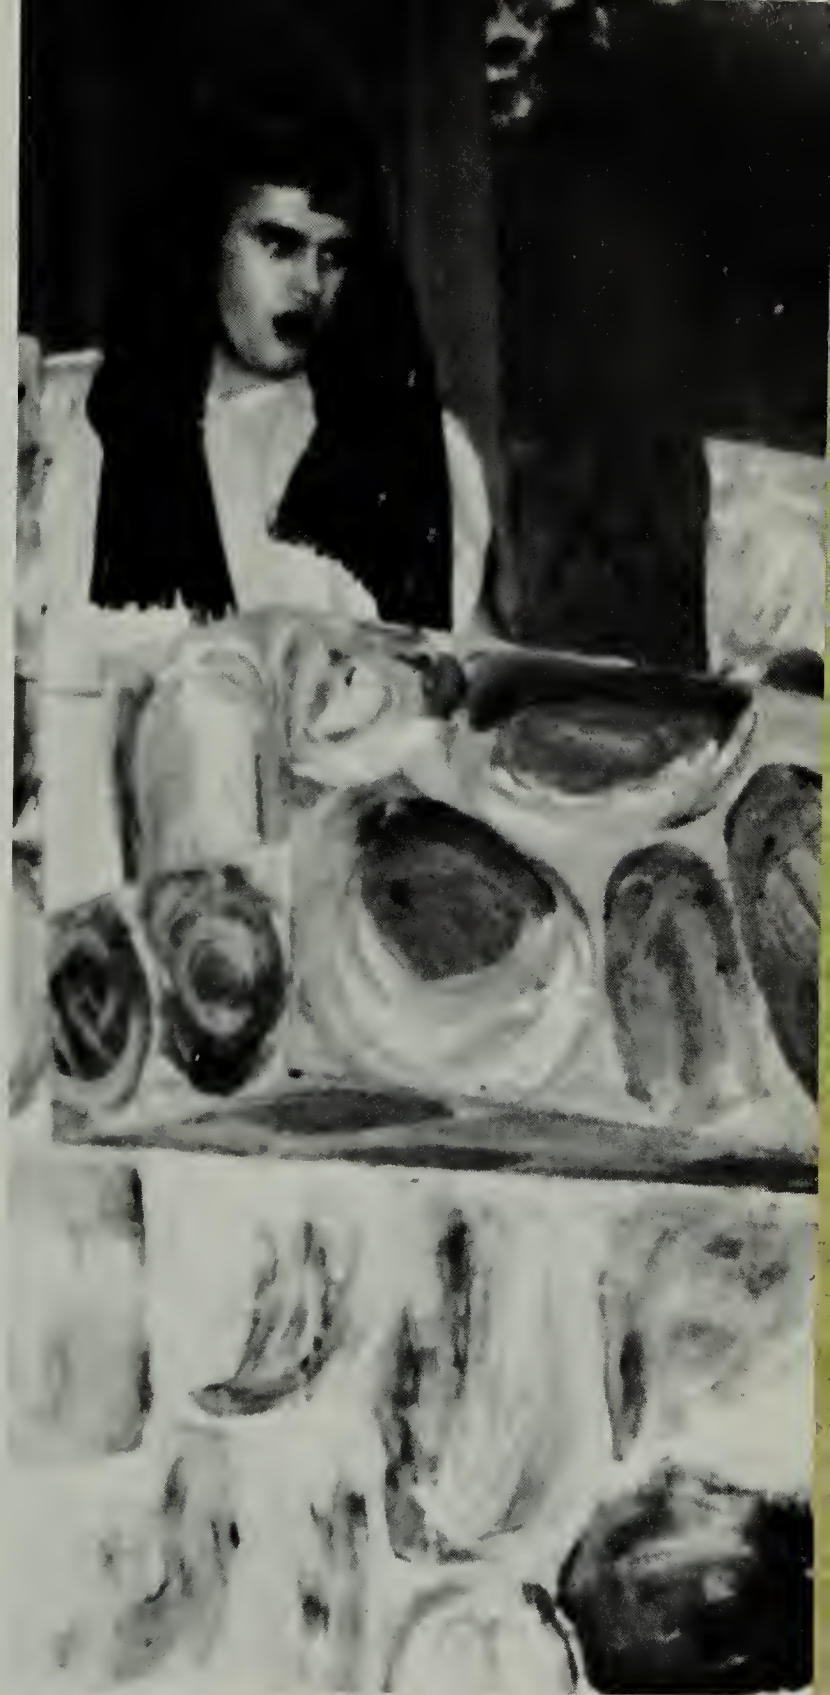

Days spent in room 212 with thesaurus, cameras, 3R layout forms, croppers, and other paraphernalia were busy ones, but no member of the 1966 staff would have missed them.

ACTIVITIES

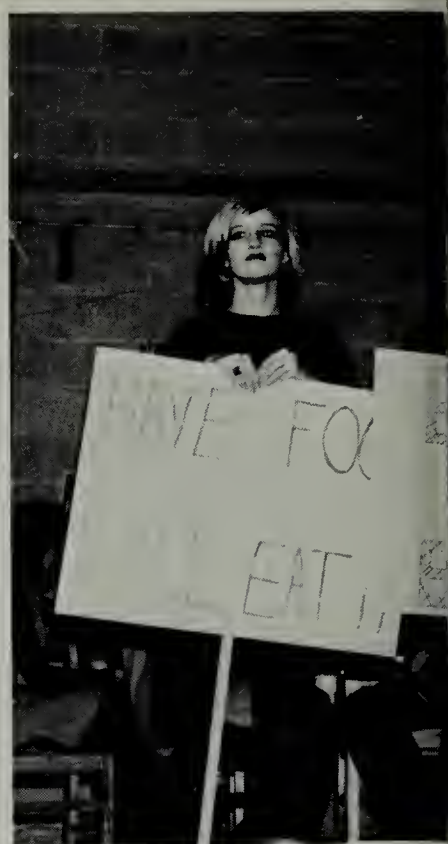

The winsome pleas of a junior variety show Romeo, the sparkling smile of a homecoming queen, the excited laughter of a cheerleader at a pre-game bonfire, the quiz-zically raised eyebrow of a foreign exchange student at her first Sadie Hawkins dance and junior-senior prom, the astonishment of a senior play maid, these and other expressions animate the faces of WHS students.

An active group, WHS students spill their enthusiasm into a variety of school related activities.

Juniors carry out

Cold March winds whirled outside while inside all was warmth and laughter as Big Ben tolled 8:00 and the 1965 Junior-Senior Prom began. Hues of blue, lavender, aqua, and turquoise depicted spring skies of London. A majestic old bridge, afloat in a balm of fog, stood amid the frenzy caused by the Divits of Roanoke.

In the lobby guests received favors from suddenly serene underclassmen dressed as palace guards. Behind them, lending an air of solemnity to the guard houses, was a laboriously made British coat of arms.

Leaving the gym, many juniors stole one last glance at the London Fog and the memories it carried. They remembered the many frantic hours decorating the gym under the supervision of prom chairman Jeannie Kay.

These memories were to last long after the last guest stepped out of the fog and back into the cold March air.

plans for long-awaited prom and show.

Unexpressable, undefinable . . . these adjectives were used to describe the unpredictable Junior Variety Show for 1965. From the opening act of that hilarious Romeo and Juliet team to the free-for-all pie fight in the slapstick scene, the show was termed a tremendous success by all spectators.

Slowly, stepby dance step, juniors rehearsed until late into the night. Cancan music could be heard belting from the cafeteria after school hours, mingled with the patient voice of Mide Brondoli, show director.

Many hours of anguish and anticipation created the Junior Variety Show for 1965, but the highlight came at the end of the last rehearsal, when the show was applauded by the principal, Mr. Kiger. The Class of '66 found themselves bonded together to produce a show to surpass all performances.

The Junior Variety Show has passed from a reality to a

An unforgettable dream came true for Barbara Batten, as one of the year's most anticipated events brought her the title of Homecoming Queen, 1965. From the magic moment of the crowning on the field to the last strains of the fabulous Townsman in the gym, Homecoming was a never to be forgotten night for the queen and her court.

Senior princesses Donna Hunter and Kathy Meeteer were escorted by John Luxton and David Holmes. Junior representatives included Emily Curry, escorted by Bill Hawkins, and Connie Metcalf, escorted by John Van Deman. Rosie Myers and Betty Baylor represented the sophomore class. They were escorted by J. R. Bell and John Kindt.

Those who noticed the boys becoming rather edgy with the approaching of November could have accurately attributed their frantic looks to the Beta Club's annual Sadie Hawkins dance. Sadie Hawkins provides an opportunity for students to experience what the opposite sex goes through in working up enough nerve to ask someone out and in accepting.

Barefoot girls and ragged boys danced to the latest tunes until 11:30, when many girls returned home thankful to let the boys carry on. When the Sadie Hawkins Court was finally announced, Pat Durkin received his carrot and pickle crown designating him as this year's king. On Pat's court were Randy McGann from the junior class and Scott Taylor, who represented the sophomores.

"I just love it!" she exclaimed.

Cathy's skill in knitting proved beneficial to her this winter in a climate very unlike the warm one she is accustomed to in Peru. Enjoying her favorite sport, sleighing, she obtained a true picture of winter in Waynesboro.

The students of Waynesboro High School hope that Cathy will carry home to Peru as many memories as she leaves here.

Success seemed to be the key word this last season, as Coaches Boyd, Counts and Taylor molded the 1965 WHS track team into one of the best in the district. Suffering their only defeat at the hands of Albemarle Patriots, the '65 track team finished third in the Valley District Championship Meet. Co-captains David Nease and Gary Robertson led the Little Giants to victory in four dual meets and one tri-meet, including the one point win over Wilson's Green Hornets. An ever improving host of valuable players, who will be back in '66, are sure to make this coming season another triumph for the WHS track team.

For three years Waynesboro High sponsored golf teams, and for three years they won the District Championship. The '65 Golf Team was no exception, and, in keeping with tradition, added the District Championship trophy to their already overfilled showcase. The team met stiff competition at the State Finals and was held to third place for the second time in a row. The '66 season is sure to see a team of tough veterans once again vying for top honors.

Peter Dodd missed this putt in the match for the District Championship, but made a fine showing along with the rest of the team, which went on to win the District Title.

It was a long, rough season for Waynesboro High's Baseball Team last year. The Little Giants were hard pressed by their district opponents, but Coach Blosser brought them through the heat of the season with a 5-8 record. Despite some close, heart-breaking games and the loss of several valuable players, the team remains undaunted and is looking forward to the '66 season with stiff determination. This determination, coupled with the knowledge of Coach Blosser should prove to be a combination hard to beat.

JV's win District Championship.

It might have been just a little bit more incentive, or it may have been just a little bit more skill, but the fact remains that the '65-'66 junior varsity squad was just a little bit better. These Little Big Giants victimized anything the other district schools dared put on the same gym floor. They had only one blemish on their record, a loss to arch-rival R. E. Lee near the season's end. This first loss came as a stunning blow, but under the fine leadership of Coach Lotts the team redeemed itself in a last minute win over Harrisonburg.

Once again Waynesboro's basketball team has done a superb job. Coach Blosser piloted the Little Giants through a season filled with staunch opposition and close games. The Little Giants used all of their dexterity, skill, and intelligence to finish the '65-'66 season with a record of 10-7. Highlighting the season was a heartbreaking loss by one point to Lexington in the tournament. Prominent players of last season included Ferguson, Leavell, Wells, Belcher, Bailey, and Leighton. The return of several standouts in addition to several junior varsity players is sure to provide Waynesboro High with another successful season.

Best wishes to one of the coolest guys I know, and he has best season in six years.

In the past five years, though Waynesboro High has produced some great players and tough teams, they have been hard put to hold their own against some of the big district contenders. This year, Coaches Counts, Novak, Boyd, Lotts, Hamp, and Taylor turned unorganized tryouts into one of the finest teams in the district. Offensively, Meeteer totaled 32 points for the Little Giants, while Todd and Belcher did outstanding jobs as pass receivers. Defensively, Cross, Freed, and Robertson gave the opposition a regular fit.

Co-captains Cross and Lytle led the Little Giants to their first winning season in six years. Next season should find tough, experienced players once again fighting for WHS and aiming for the District Championship.

X lots of luck to a great guy. I hope it's easy on the women this summer and don't raise to much "hell".

A decision of where to buy a car, sweater, or pencil is often influenced by the advertising of a successful merchant. Advertising in Waynesboro stimulates the patronage of 18,000 people, including 850 high school students with an increasing purchasing power. The city is marked with the faces of advertising-- signs, billboards, the people who are themselves advertisements for their home.

An index used with an accurate yearbook assists in knowing WHS students, an influential part of Waynesboro's population.

Dear Graduate:

Congratulations on the successful completion of your high school curriculum. You have passed a most vital and important phase of preparation for your future.

Your standard of living, your position in the life of your community and your economic security may well depend on the amount of education you take with you when you seek employment.

For those of you who are qualified to benefit by higher education, may we urge you to take it, if you can possibly do so.

The faces of WHS are those of buildings,

THE SPORTSMAN'S CR
HE NEVER BOOS A PLAYER OR OF
HE APPRECIATES A GOOD PLA
NO MATTER WHO MAKES
HE KNOWS THAT THE SCHO PRAISED OR BLAMED FOR HIS

faculty, and students.

Buildings and teachers and students make up Waynesboro High School. Each element is an important one, deserving notice in a group of photographs; however, the student faces stand out as they recur again and again. Mingled with the faces of the sportsman's creed board in the gym, of the first icicle of winter on the auditorium wall, of teachers laughing with the joy of existence or simply pondering reality are the faces of active teens chatting with friends after a basketball game, playing the guitar at a school dance, writing a paper in French class, and simply thinking of indefinable things.

The student faces are the truly important faces of Waynesboro High School.

*Faces in every phase of school activity are reflected in this,
the story of a school year,
compiled by the 1966 SKYLINE staff.*

To the students of Waynesboro High School, the 1966 Skyline staff has presented in photographs and words the various faces of an active high school.

Special thanks are due the heads of sections of the book; each did considerably more than was required of him to produce this yearbook of faces. Because of their efforts, the graduating class of 1966 will better remember the faces that made up their senior year of high school.

Seniors on the staff donated much time and effort beyond school hours to the 1966 SKYLINE. These were the indispensable members of the staff: Jo Pidcock and Charlotte Sandquist, senior section editors; David Chalkley, organizations editor; Donna Hunter, faculty and curriculum editor; Kathy Meeteer, activities editor; Fleming James, advertisements editor; Samme Bragg, Copy editor.

Additional thanks is due Alison Rothermel and Ann Carson for compiling the sophomore and junior sections, respectively; John Kindt and Carolyn Foster for working on the athletics section of the SKYLINE; and Claude Skelton for putting forth effort with art and layouts.

Student photographers, Bob Foss and Bill Mitchell, and professional photographers, Bill Alwood and André Studios, are owed acknowledgement for the candid and formal photographs making up this annual.

Last and especially, however, Blair Clark, assistant editor, and Mrs. Reba Brooks, faculty sponsor, must be thanked fully for assistance. All the staff found in Mrs. Brooks a willingness, patience, and help that are indeed rare. They join in hoping there is some reward to be found in this 1966 SKYLINE.

Yes, the faces of WHS are those of its buildings, of its faculty, and especially of its students. And a group of these faces organized to keep alive the faces of their school, Waynesboro High School, through the 1966 SKYLINE.

Bill,
Hope you have some good parties this summer
and don't do anything
I wouldn't do.
Love Squash

To all my family
